GRAND MILITARY REVIEW.

A Levee Held to Receive Foreign Consuls.

AT FANEUIL HALL.

Great Crushing, Much Cheering, but No Eloquence.

GOVERNOR RICE'S BANQUET.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

BOSTON, June 26, 1877.

The advent of Mr. Hayes to New England and his reception in Boston to-day have been marked by an exhibition on the part of the people of the most kindly and cordial feeling. Indeed, it may be said that never before has a public official been greeted with such an overwhelming ovation. Nothing like it was ever witnessed in Boston. Business was very generally suspended throughout the city, and from the surrounding country thousands and thousands came in to unite in the general demonstration of welcome, which was continued during the day and evening.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PARTY.

The President is accompanied on this occasion by Mrs. Hayes, Secretary Evarts, Secretary Devens, Postmaster General Key, General Comly, of Ohio, the newly appointed Minister to the Sandwich Islands; Mr. Webb C. Hayes, son and private secretary of the President. Misses Platt and Foote, who are nieces, and Mr. Platt, who is a nephew of Mrs. Hayes. Besides those ladies and gentlemen the President's orderly and two other attendants accompanied the party, including General Comly, proprietor of the Ohio State Journal, who was Lieutenant Colonel of the regiment which General Hayes commanded during the war.

The journey from Washington was uneventful until the party began to penetrate New England, and then commenced the popular demonstrations which have been in order ever since. The route selected for the journey was the new Washington and Boston line via New York and New England Railroad, and under the personal supervision of Manager Clark the journey was rendered one of rare enjoyment to all the distinguished party. A little speech was made when the train reached Putnam, Conn., at about seven o'clock in the morning. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd, and the President was persuaded into making a speech in response to words of welcome uttered to him by Hon. G. W. Phillips as the representative of citizens:—

FIRST SPEECH OF THE PRESIDENT.

In his reply the President said:—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I am very glad to exchange greetings with this patriotic gathering of citizens of Northeastern Connecticut. My ancestors belonged to Windham, Conn. (Applause.) To Norwich, Lebanon, Windham and, possibly, to Putnam, came my ancestors, the Birchards. My great grandfathers, I am told, was with the company which represented this part of Connecticut and went to take part in the battle of Bunker Hill. But, friends, there is not time for speechmaking, and I am sure that you will be glad to meet those who have come with us. Allow me to introduce Attorney General Devens.

REMARKS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

The Attorney General said:—

FELLOW CITIZENS—I am very much obliged to President Hayes for this introduction, and am very glad to meet you this morning; the demonstration was not unexpected. I am sure that from this time onward till he reaches the metropolis of New England, the President will be greeted at every station in the same way. The heart of New England always beats warmly for the President of the united States, because New England comprehends well that it was owing to the Union formed by United States that we have become a great and mighty nation instead of a mere collection of individual States. I am sure that the olden spirit of our fathers still lives in the sons of New England. (Applause.)

POSTMASTER KEY'S REMARKS.

The President—Allow me to introduce a gentleman from East Tennessee, who believes, as you do, in a united country and equal human rights, Judge Key, the Postmaster General. (Applause.) The Postmaster General said:—

MY FRIENDS—It has been my fortune to have been born in a different section of the country from this. I come from that part of the land of which you have all heard—the South, and I am glad to meet here this morning so many of the loyal men and hearts of New England. (Applause.)

Cheers were given for the President, Attorney General and the Postmaster General, and the train proceeded.

FALLING BACK UPON KEY.

At Blackstone, there was a similar gathering, and the President having been introduced, said:—

FELLOW CITIZENS—I thank you for this hearty welcome to Massachusetts. I have the pleasure of introducing to you a gentleman connected with the administration of the general government, residing in Tennessee. He did not agree with you and with me in the way of voting at the last election, but at present he believes as you do that this is a nation, a united country—Postmaster General Key.

The Postmaster General was received with cheers, and said:—

MY FRIENDS—Loyal men of the ancient Commonwealth of Massachusetts—I come to you from a far-off land, and I trust that, with me, you love our country, its flag, its institutions and its liberties. (Applause.)

GENERAL DEVENS BROUGHT FORWARD.

The President—I now have the pleasure of presenting to you one of your own distinguished citizens, a distinguished soldier in the war for the Union—Attorney General Devens. (Applause.)

The Attorney General—I am very much obliged to the President, and I am very glad to see again citizens of Massachusetts and of my own county of Worcester. I am sure that I am no stranger here, for I have known you in times past, and have known your devotion when it was necessary to maintain the Union by the sword, and now I hope the time has come when all seek to sustain it by the arts of peace, when again the citizens shall earn deserved happiness at the loom and the anvil. Heartily, fellow-citizens, I wish you success in all your pursuits, and I trust we shall soon have a revival of business that will make your valley again active with the music of wheels and looms, that will give to every man an honest living and competence.

SPEECH BY SECRETARY SCHURZ.

The PRESIDENT—I am afraid we are detaining the train too long, but I will detain it a moment longer to introduce another soldier and adopted citizen, General Carl Schurz, the Secretary of the Interior.

General SCHURZ—My Fellow Citizens—As the President has been pleased to remark, I am representing in the Cabinet that element of our population that came from foreign lands to share with you the blessings of liberty, and to perpetuate with you the great Republic of the New World. As would seem proper, the President has assigned to me a department which has in some sense the care of the home affairs of the people—the Department of the Interior. I have to deal with the Indians; I have to deal with the public lands, and with other questions relating to the development of the industries of our country. I have to pay pensions as some compensation to the soldiers who so bravely stood in the front of the battle to defend our country, and came home with the wounds on their bodies; and to the widows who sacrificed their husbands to preserve the integrity of the Republic. I have to do with the education of the country to which, more than to anything else, the American people owe their position; and I am happy to say that we now stand upon that soil from which the educational influences that have covered the land with light have radiated more than from any other point on this great country of ours; for upon the soil of New England and in the great men of New England those influences originated. For the President I am heartily grateful for the hearty welcome given him so early in the morning. I am glad to see that on this occasion, as on others, the people of Massachusetts are up early. Now, I do not desire to longer detain the train, though I should be very glad to introduce to you the Secretary of State, who was the latest of us all this morning.

The PRESIDENT—We bid you good morning.

As the train left the station cheers were given for the distinguished gentlemen who had spoken.

A GARLAND OF LOVE.

At Franklin a similar scene occurred. The President stepped from the train to a prepared platform, where immediately a young lady placed about his neck a beautiful garland of flowers, with the expression of hope that it might be an emblem of the love which he should encounter wherever he went in New England. The President spoke only a few words of thanks, and he was followed in the same strain by Postmaster General Key and Secretary Evarts.

DECORATIONS IN BOSTON.

The decorations in the city, though profuse, were not conspicuously elaborate. Almost every house and building had some decorative feature, and in Chester square and Colorado avenue and some of the business streets special attention had been given to the display of flags, &c. Nearly all of the vessels in the harbor were clothed in colors.

ARRIVAL AT NORFOLK.

The train arrived at Highland Lake Grove, in the town of Norfolk, at twenty-five minutes to nine, and the gentlemen of the party alighted for breakfast, while Mrs. Hayes and her two nieces—the Misses Foote and Platt, of Washington—in charge of Colonel John H. Rice, of the Governor's staff, came directly into Boston, carriages being provided here to take them to the Brunswick for breakfast, after which they were driven to the State House to witness the procession, and from thence to the Brunswick to witness the grand review. The place chosen for the first alighting of the President and his friends was selected in order to give him rest and quiet before joining in the more demonstrative and wearing ceremonies of the day. This was at Highland Lake Grove, in the town of Norfolk, twenty-two miles from the city.

GRAND ESCORT TO THE "HUB."

The Governor and commander-in-chief had detailed Adjutant General James A. Cunningham, Colonel William V. Hutching and Colonel William A. Tower, of his staff, to go to Norfolk and escort the President to Boston. Accordingly these took the train at six o'clock from the Boston depot, accompanied by the following invited guests:—United States Marshal Roland G. Usher, Hon. A. W. Beard, Hon. E. W. Kinsley, James Sturgiss, Burchard Hayes, son of the President, and his friends, Messrs. W. D. Howels and D. P. Lathrop; Messrs. William T. Hart, President H. H. Britten, Superintendent George Phippen, Treasurer Colonel W. W. McKim, A. C. Kendall, General Ticket Agent Thomas Nixon, all of the New York and New England Railroad, and E. H. Tucker, Superintendent of the Woonsocket division, and a squad of twenty members of the Independent Corps of Cadets to act as a guard of honor, a squad of police, members of the press and a few others. These arrived at the grove at seven o'clock, and after a few moments' stroll sat down to breakfast in the regular restaurant, the menu being the same as that subsequently provided for the Presidential party. Meanwhile the residents in the neighborhood had gathered in large numbers near the railroad station and awaited the arrival of the Presidential train. It came at twenty-five minutes of nine, and halted only long enough to detach the rear car, in which were the President, the Cabinet officials and male friends of the party. These stepped out quietly and without ceremony, there being a little scene of pleasant introduction at the platform.

IMMENSE CROWDS.

The crowd began to gather about the Dudley street station at eight o'clock, and before nine o'clock at least one thousand people were present. On the arrival of every inward and outward train so eager was the desire to get the first glimpse of the President that a rush was invariably made for it, and great difficulty was experienced by the train men in clearing the tracks and getting away from the neighborhood. Battery C, of Melrose, Captain Baldwin, First battalion of artillery, appeared upon the ground shortly after nine o'clock, with several field pieces, which were planted in an open field to the right of the railroad, in readiness to fire a salute on the arrival of the Presidential train. Major Follet's First battalion of cavalry appeared upon the ground falling close behind the artillery. The two detachments, Company A, Lancers, Captain Holt, 103 men, and Company D, seventy-five men, Captain Hall, were drawn up in the rear of the station. A squad of about thirty police, in details from stations 9 and 11, arrived about quarter past nine, being none too soon, for the crowd was growing noisy and turbulent in the extreme. Great trouble was experienced in preserving any degree of order, and the running of the trains was considerably inconvenienced, in spite of the exertions of the police to keep the railroad clear. On the arrival of the carriages containing the State authorities they were arranged in the rear of the station near the cavalry battalion, the Governor's carriage being placed in the middle of the road. The railroad gate was lowered, and a cordon of police kept the Governor's carriage clear of the crowd.

ARTILLERY SALUTES.

The train arrived at Dudley street station, Dorchester, promptly on time, and as the engine came in sight, decorated with streamers, the 10,000 people who thronged the vicinity of the railroad sent up a shout of welcome to the President which was taken up along the line of march, so that the distant spectators knew that the distinguished party had arrived. As the cars came in the customary Presidential salute was fired by Battery C, of Melrose.

Governor Rice, his staff and the invited guests were stationed on Dudley street, having proceeded to that point in carriages, and the cavalry battalion was drawn up in line between the crossing and the depot. As soon as the train stopped a detachment of cadets, under command of Lieutenant Henry Alline, alighted from the car in front of the Presidential car, and took up the position of honor at the spot where the President was to alight. President Hayes immediately left the car, and as soon as he was discovered the multitude cheered loudly.

GOVERNOR RICE WELCOMES THE PRESIDENT.

Governor Rice rapidly advanced to meet the President, and both the President and the Governor cordially grasped each other by the hand, and the latter uttered the following welcome in behalf of the Commonwealth:—

"It affords me great pleasure, Mr. President, to welcome you to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and to extend to you the hospitalities of its people. They receive you with all the honors due to your exalted station as the Chief Magistrate of the Republic, and with unqualified respect for your high personal character, purity of your purposes and with an appreciative estimate of the value of your eminent public services. We hope your brief visit among us may be as agreeable to you as our welcome is cordial and sincere. Permit me to add, Mr. President, the great personal gratification which I feel in conveying to you these respectful and friendly salutations."

"THANKS."

It was impossible for the crowd to hear what Governor Rice said because the distance was too great. President Hayes did not attempt to make any speech, but simply thanked Governor Rice for his cordial welcome and passed into the carriage.

THE PROCESSION.

The procession was then made up in the following order, and promptly took up the line of march along Dudley street:—

Mounted Police.
Chelsea Band.
Cavalry Battalion, Company A, Lancers, 103 men.
Company D, seventy-five men.
Carriages—The first containing President Hayes, Governor Rice and Adjutant General Cunningham.
Second—Hon. William M. Evarts, Hon. Charles Devens, Hon. Roland G. Usher and Colonel William V. Hutchings.
Third—Hon. Daniel M. Key, Hon. Carl Schurz and Colonel William A. Tower.
Fourth—Governor McCormick, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, ex-Governor Noyes of Ohio, Colonel A. T. Lyman and Mr. P. Alexander.
Fifth—Dr. P. B. Redfield, General Comley, General M. J. Dale, Surgeon General and Colonel Henry J. Parker.
Sixth—B. A. Hayes, Colonel J. B. Treadwell, Assistant Surgeon General, Mr. Platt, and Colonel George E. Campbell.
Seventh—Webb C. Hayes, W. Benham, United States Army, Lieutenant Colonel A. Hunberry, Assistant Inspector General and Hon. Henry B. Pierce, Secretary of State.
Eighth—Lieutenant Knight, Hon. Joseph H. Baker and Hon. William C. Plunkett.
Ninth—Hon. Harrison Tweed, Hon. Joseph A. Harwood and Hon. Hugh J. Toland, of the Executive Council, and Hon. J. B. Cogswell, President of the Massachusetts Senate.
Tenth—Hon. Frank Childs, of the Executive Council; Hon. Charles Endicott, State Treasurer; Hon. Julius S. Clark, State Auditor, and Hon. Charles R. Train, Attorney General.

The scene at Roxbury and along the line of route until the old city limits were reached was one continuous ovation, and President Hayes was kept busy returning the salutations of the spectators. The route was down Dudley street, West Cottage street, Cottage street, Blue Hill avenue, Moreland street, Warren street and Washington street to Arnold street, where the duties of the cavalry ended and the State militia took charge of the party.

INSPECTING THE LINE.

At a few minutes past eleven o'clock Colonel Kingsbury rode rapidly up the line and gave the signal for starting of the carriages containing the distinguished party which moved down the line. As the Presidential carriage, the body-guard of which was from both the Boston and Salem cadets, reached the right of the line which rested on Arnold street, the customary military salute was given by General Sutton and his staff. As he rode down the line in review each organization gave a similar salute, the bands playing "Hail to the Chief" and the drum corps and buglers also saluting. The line reached far below Franklin square and the review occupied over a half hour. The streets and the sidewalks along Washington street were thronged with people, crowding and pushing, and the windows, housetops and every available space had occupants. At twenty-five minutes past eleven the right of the line entered Chester square on its march through the city, and continued until the cavalry battalion had entered, when there was a delay of nearly a half hour, caused by the time necessary for the review of the left of the line by the President and his party and the countermarching of the troops. At about twelve the march was resumed and continued without interruption to the close, except occasionally halting for an instant.

GREETED BY THE STATE MILITARY.

Upon the arrival of the party at the junction of Arnold and Washington streets the entire infantry of the State Militia were drawn up in line of battle to receive the party, extending north on Washington street in the following order:—

Second brigade, First brigade, First corps of cadets and Second corps of cadets.

The Presidential party passed down the line of troops and was received with a military salute from each battalion. They were then taken to a position between the First and Second corps of cadets, and proceeded to the left of the Second brigade, which had already passed through Chester Park. The escort then moved in the following order:—

Chief of Police.
Eight mounted police.
Second brigade, commanded by Brigadier General Eben Sutton and staff.

The brigade included the Eighth regiment, Colonel Peach, 350 men, all of whom were in out of town companies; the Fifth regiment, commanded by Colonel Trull, 286 men; Ninth battalion of infantry, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Strachan, 270 men; First battalion of infantry, 291 men, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Wales; Seventh battalion of infantry, Major Fry, 119 men; battery A, light artillery, Captain Appleton, 75 men; First battalion cavalry, Major J. H. Follitt, 175 men; First corps cadets, Lieutenant Colonel Edmunds, 125 men; the President's party in carriages, as above described, followed by the Second corps of cadets, 60 men, Lieutenant Colonel Dalton.

The First brigade came next, commanded by Brigadier General Hobart Moore, embracing the following organizations:—The Sixth regiment infantry, 360 men, Colonel Beal; Tenth regiment infantry, 320 men, Colonel Kimball; Second battalion infantry, 258 men, Colonel Hamilton; Fourth battalion infantry, 180 men, Major Wellington; Third battalion infantry, 170 men, Major Butler; First battalion light artillery, 150 men, Major Merrill; Company F, cavalry, Chelmsford, 70 men, with a detachment of police bringing up the rear.

LINE OF MARCH.

The route of the march was as follows:—Washington street, south side of Chester square and Westchester Park, Columbus avenue, Dartmouth, Tremont, Boylston, Washington, Summer, High, Federal, Franklin, Broadway, Milk, India, State, Washington, School, Beacon and Arlington streets, Commonwealth avenue, Dartmouth and Boylston streets to Hotel Brunswick. The procession occupied about forty minutes passing a given point. All along the route cheers and waving of handkerchiefs from windows, housetops and every point of observation greeted the President.

AT THE STATE HOUSE.

When the head of the column reached the corner of Beacon and Park streets broad areas in the Beacon street end, extending down Park street and up Mount Vernon street, were filled with people awaiting an opportunity for a glimpse at the Presidential party. The gates leading to the State House steps were closed, but there were several hundred people on the verandah of the State House, who had gained admission by a rear entrance. The most notable feature of the arrangements at the State House was the decoration of the central portion of the upper balcony for the accommodation of the wife of the President and the ladies of her party. The front of the balustrade was handsomely festooned with bunting and the national colors were entwined in many graceful designs around the pillars and niches. The central portion was carpeted.

About noon Mrs. Hayes and the ladies of her party were taken from the Hotel Brunswick and escorted to the State House to witness the passage of the procession. The party was now composed of the following ladies:—Mrs. Hayes, Miss Foote, Miss Platt, Mrs. McCormick, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Loring Andrews, of New York; Mrs. Budd, of New York; Miss Van Kleck, of New York; Mrs. Lithroe Devens and Miss Devens, Mrs. Stetson and Mrs. Davis, daughters of Governor Rice. They were escorted by Colonels Rice, Luther and Mason, of the Governor's staff, and President Cogswell, of the Senate, and a few others occupied positions on the side of the balcony. When the President's carriage came in view it was greeted with hearty cheers, which were repeated again and again, forming a perfect ovation while it was passing between the dense masses of people which lined the street at this point. After the column had passed the State House the ladies were returned to the Hotel Brunswick, through Beacon, Charles and Boylston streets, in season to witness the final review.

THE REVIEW AT HOTEL BRUNSWICK.

The President and party arrived at the Hotel Brunswick at two o'clock, and with the officers of the army and navy stationed in Boston, immediately took places on the reviewing stand. The two corps of Cadets were drawn up in front of the hotel, and during the review remained at parade rest, the field music of the two corps saluting each organization as its right reached the reviewing stand.

Mrs. Hayes, the ladies accompanying the Presidential party and the guests of the Governor came to the reviewing stand and were loudly cheered by the assembled multitude.

The appearance of the troops as they marched in review was uniformly excellent. The review lasted three-quarters of an hour, after which the two corps of cadets saluted the President and were dismissed for the day.

DECORATING THE PRESIDENT'S ROOMS.

The President's apartments at the Hotel Brunswick are marvels of decorative skill and were highly praised by the Presidential party. The entire first story, consisting of over thirty rooms, is engaged for the Presidential party, the President's suit being at the corner of Boylston and Clarendon streets, facing the former avenue. The President's rooms are three in number—parlor, sleeping apartment and banquet room. The parlor is finished in gold and maroon, the walls being tinted to correspond. The sleeping apartment of the President and Mrs. Hayes is furnished in pink drapery, drab carpet and birds-eye maple furniture. The banquet room is just being finished. A floral ball, two feet in diameter, made of 2,000 carnations, is suspended over the table and is filled with flags of all nations radiating from its centre. On the table is a floral basket, four feet in length, on each end of which is a smaller basket. A shield of choice small flowers is placed over each door, festooned with smilax and garlands, depend from the chandelier, and other members of the Presidential party, Governor Rice and Council, several United States and State officials and prominent citizens, entered one of the parlors of the Hotel Brunswick, where it was expected by many that there would be a formal presentation of distinguished persons to Mr. Hayes. These expectations were only partially realized, as the only formal introductions to the President were of consuls and vice consuls located in Boston and representing foreign Powers. These were made by J. M. Rodocanachi, Consul of Greece, located at Boston. A large number of distinguished officials and prominent citizens were present in the hotel.

LUNCH.

Many of these gentlemen, although not formally presented to the President, shook hands with him, and without further ceremony the Presidential party, together with Governor Rice and Council and the favored guests, repaired to the dining room for lunch. At this a large number of distinguished people were present, including, by invitation of the President and suite, prominent federal officials and others. The hour was spent here until the time arrived for the President to enter a carriage en route for Faneuil Hall.

AT FANEUIL HALL.

Immediately after four o'clock the President, Secretaries Schurz, Evarts, Key and Attorney General Devens, escorted by Governor Rice, Mayor Prince and the members of the Governor's staff, entered Faneuil Hall. The ropes were at once let down and the crowd pressed eagerly forward to shake hands with the President. For an hour there was an incessant flow of men, women and children, making a crowd of more then ordinary intelligence, though here and there were specimens of the "great unwashed" who were universally greeted with expressions of disfavor by the people in the galleries. At five o'clock the handshaking was discontinued, and Mayor Prince, stepping to the platform, presented the President to the audience. His appearance in this position of greater prominence was the signal for long continued and enthusiastic cheering, the ladies waving an accompaniment with their handkerchiefs.

ULYSSES OUTDONE.

In response President Hayes said:—"I regret that the engagements of the committee are such that I cannot shake hands with all who would like to shake hands with me. I should be very glad to shake the hands of those who convey to me this generous Boston welcome. I bid you good night."

Amid cheers and cries for Secretary Evarts the Presidential party moved rapidly out of the hall by the rear entrance, and, taking carriages, were conveyed to their quarters at the Brunswick.

A SOCIAL BANQUET.

At seven o'clock the banquet given by Governor Rice to Mr. Hayes took place in the private parlors of the Brunswick. The affair was entirely private and social, and no speeches were made.

The following were the guests, who entered in the order named:—Governor Rice and Mrs. Hayes, President Hayes and Mrs. Stetson, daughter of Governor Rice; Secretary Evarts and Mrs. Mayor Prince. Mayor Prince and Mrs. Davies, Postmaster General Key and Mrs. Lieutenant Governor Knight, Secretary Devens and Mrs. Storer, Secretary Schurz and Mrs. J. R. Lowell, Governor McCormick and Mrs. Speaker Long, President Elliott and Miss Evarts, Chief Justice Gay and Miss Foote, President of the Senate Cogswell and Mrs. McCormick, J. R. Lowell and Miss Evarts the second, Governor Noyes and Miss Platt, Colonel Storer and Miss Rice, Lieutenant Governor Knight and Miss Devens and Speaker Long and B. A. Hayes.

ENOUGH FOR A DAY.

The banquet was concluded at half-past eight P. M., when the Presidential party took carriages and drove to Music Hall, where a concert was given by the Apollo Club in compliment to President Hayes.

MORE ENTHUSIASM.

The concert of the Apollo Club, at the Music Hall, began at twenty-five minutes of nine o'clock. It was given at the request of Governor Rice. None but invited guests were present. The audience numbered about three hundred, and was one of the most brilliant ever assembled there. Upon the arrival of the Presidential party the entire audience arose amid cheering and waving of handkerchiefs and the greatest enthusiasm. The concert was very fine, and the President remained to the close. On the sidewalks there was an immense throng awaiting to catch a glimpse of the President.

RECEPTION OF THE LOYAL LEGION.

The reception of the Loyal Legion came off at Young's Hotel at half-past ten o'clock. General Devens assumed command and 300 members thronged the parlors to greet the President. Upon arrival he was received with great applause, the band playing "Rally 'Round the Flag." The President was accompanied by Secretary Schurz, Postmaster General Key, Governor Rice and staff and Mayor Prince. General Devens introduced the members to the President, after which a collation was served. The President retired at eleven P. M. After his departure General Devens was called on for a speech and responded; also Governor Noyes and others.

To-morrow the President, at nine A. M., escorted by the Lancers, leaves the State House for Harvard College, where he will witness the commencement exercises, attend the commencement dinner, and, in the evening, a grand concert at Tremont Tabernacle.

THE HAYTIAN MINISTER.

Among the passengers sailing to-day on the Atlas mail line steamship Andes, and bound for Port au Prince, Hayti, is the Hon. Stephen Preston, Haytian Minister at Washington. He was suddenly summoned from Lake George, where he had been stopping with his family, by his government, to consult on certain questions in dispute between citizens of the United States and Hayti.

STAHL'S HORRIBLE DEATH.

The trial of Franz Scharnagel for the alleged murder of Joseph Stahl by setting him on fire at Kobler & Kamena's brewery, in Guttenberg, was continued at Jersey City yesterday. County Physician Converse testified substantially to the facts fully published in the HERALD at the time of the horrible occurrence in his statement. Valentine Bartlino was recalled and cross-examined without eliciting anything new of interest. The trial will be continued to-day.

THE ST. JOHN SUFFERERS.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 26, 1877.

The work of tearing down walls and opening vaults and safes continues. The contents generally are in bad condition. The Western Union Telegraph Company is preparing to erect a magnificent building. The principal merchants are having the débris cleared for new buildings. The gas company promises to supply gas within six weeks. A registration book is placed in the Court House for the purpose of giving information to families whose children are missing. Supplies have been distributed in a systematic and judicious manner, every precaution being taken to prevent waste and fraud. A headquarters for the distribution of provisions, bedding and clothing has been established at the Rink, where all who receive tickets for relief must apply. The enclosure is constantly thronged with applicants armed with tickets from the committee or prominent citizens, and from seventeen to twenty thousand are daily supplied with substantial food. The amount of provisions already consumed is enormous, but the stock holds out well and is constantly replenished. Odd Fellows, Masons and Knights of Pythias everywhere are sending to the St. John lodges large contributions of money and goods. Nearly every insurance company is sending a subscription. Mr. Allicer, the New York manager of the Imperial Insurance Company of London, and Messrs. Lise and Bullard, of the Phœnix, Brooklyn, arrived here to-night. These companies and the Ætna, Hartford, and British American will discharge their losses in about three weeks.

MEETING AT THE COOPER INSTITUTE LAST NIGHT—ADDRESSES BY REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER AND OTHERS—THANKS FROM THE MAYOR OF THE AFFLICTED CITY.

A meeting was held last night in the large hall of the Cooper Institute for the purpose of taking measures to relieve the distress caused by the fire at St. John, New Brunswick. The hall was more than half filled. The threatening storm just previous to the hour for the commencement and the shortness of the notice doubtless caused the small attendance. Mayor Ely, who presided, briefly stated the object of the meeting and then introduced Mr. Henry Ward Beecher, who was received with applause. He said that he should be sorry to have been absent from a meeting called to aid a people so intimately connected with us as were the people of St. John. In referring to his visit there he said that it seemed to him that it was but as yesterday since he was in that city and was a guest in the magnificent hotel that was now in ashes. The thought that should be present in the minds of those he was addressing was that a similar calamity might befall them at any time. It mattered little where such accidents happen. Where suffering was felt, whether it was in New York or in Brooklyn, or in France, or on the distant battle fields, or elsewhere, the sentiment of true brotherhood was aroused within us. In these times this feeling of our common humanity had become a sentiment, and was no longer a dogma. And this feeling was not confined to ourselves, but was equally true of the whole human race. There were reasons, however, in this particular instance, that should arouse within us more than ordinary sympathy for these sufferers. If these were within our own border we should need no special inducement to go to their help. But if we were swift to aid our own children how much swifter ought we to be to aid those of a friend! There should be manifested toward these sufferers by us a courtesy, a chivalry, a Christian heroism, because they are not of us, but near neighbors to us. These sentiments seemed to be peculiarly appropriate now because in Great Britain great honors were being shown to General Grant by all classes, from the Queen upon the throne. (Applause.) There were other reasons that suggested themselves. The old Revolutionary fervor had died out, we were forever separated from the mother country, party questions no longer agitated us, and we felt that these people of St. John are very near akin to us.

WHO THE ST. JOHN PEOPLE ARE.

It was a pleasure for him to remember that these people of St. John, before our revolutionary era, had left the American shores just as conscientiously as any Puritans had left England, because they could not live under the dominion of a tyranny that was afterward resisted by Americans. St. John was principally settled by refugees from Massachusetts and the adjoining States. Mr. Beecher then described the beauty of the cities of Montreal, Toronto and Quebec, and commented on the industrial qualities of the Canadians, and said that it was as true in nations as in private life that it was a good thing to have a good neighbor. Since we may not annex Canada—once he thought we should (applause)—for we have as much territory now as we can take care of, it had been said that America wanted Mexico. Good heavens! Mexico! Let us, he said, cultivate kindness and good feeling to our neighbors. It is merely a political line that separates, and in their sorrow let us be their comforters. In this matter there could be no feeling of sectarianism—all questions of whether they were Protestants or Catholics must be forgotten. The meeting had been called together hastily. Had it not been so the hall would not have been large enough to contain those who desired to attend. The citizens of New York would do all that was in their power to assist these sufferers, and then when he next trod the streets of the city of St. John he would see as he had seen in Chicago a miracle of rebuilding that was more wonderful than the miracle of destruction, and he would see in St. John a city of greater beauty rising from the ashes of the site of the present calamity. (Applause.)

Mr. W. O. Bourne and Mr. John H. Kitchen briefly addressed the audience, after which a list of vice presidents was read and a resolution was passed appointing the vice presidents a committee for receiving subscriptions. Among them were the names of Mr. Peter Cooper, Henry Ward Beecher, Cyrus W. Field, William Orton, William E. Dodge, William H. Wickham, John T. Hoffman, E. D. Morgan, Noah Davis and Charles P. Daly.

TELEGRAMS.

Mayor Ely read the following telegrams:—

JOHN MCLEAN, New York:—

Your most welcome telegram received yesterday. The generous offers of aid are most cheering in our overwhelming calamity, which has nearly paralyzed all business and occasioned deep and widespread distress, two-thirds of the property of our city being destroyed.

S. J. EARLE, Mayor of St. John.

E. M. ARCHIBALD, New York:—

Accept our warmest thanks and express our gratitude to those who through you so generously and seasonably contributed to our relief. The warm sympathy and substantial aid coming in from all quarters have much cheered us in our great calamity.

S. J. EARLE, Mayor of St. John.

The meeting adjourned about nine o'clock.

BOSTON'S NOBLE EXAMPLE.

BOSTON, Mass., June 26, 1877.

Up to the present time Boston has contributed $23,502 for the relief of the St. John sufferers.

THE CHICAGO RELIEF MEETING.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 26, 1877.

The mass-meeting for the relief of St. John, N. B., coming on about the time of the storm, was slimly attended, but active committees were appointed to circulate among the various trades and professions, and will doubtless soon report considerable sums raised.

COLLECTIONS IN LONDON, ENGLAND.

LONDON, June 26, 1877.

Yesterday an influential deputation of merchants and bankers, headed by Sir John Rose, late Finance Minister for the Dominion of Canada, waited upon the Lord Mayor and requested him to consent to receive subscriptions for the sufferers by the St. John fire. The deputation announced that $7,500 was already collected, and suggested that the distribution of the fund should be entrusted to the Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick, the Mayor of St. John and the President of the Board of Trade, with power to associate with them any other gentlemen to aid them in their work.

The Lord Mayor assented with pleasure to receive subscriptions at the Mansion House, and promised to make a public appeal on behalf of the sufferers.

TORONTO, June 26, 1877.

A special despatch from London, England, says:—A cablegram from the Mayor of St. John appears in the papers stating the extent of the disaster. Mr. Annend, Agent General for Canada, has initiated a movement for the relief of the sufferers by the fire. Messrs. Guy, Stewart, Rose, the Barings, Glyns and other wealthy and influential merchants are arranging with the Lord Mayor, at the Mansion House, for a relief fund.

LIFE INSURANCE NOTES.

AMERICAN POPULAR BOOKKEEPING—PULLING AND HAULING THE CONTINENTAL FUND.

Mr. E. Z. Laurence, receiver of the American Popular Life Insurance Company, is making some explorations in the books which foreshadow some remarkable developments. There are many suspicious entries, including purchases of bank stocks, subscriptions to capital stock and dealings in "conditional certificates" that present an awkward appearance to the receiver's mind. It is believed that the company was in a precarious condition four years ago, and that misrepresentations have been made on the books ever since. In several years large balances were shown on the 1st of January, which had never existed during the months previous. This was for the purpose of making up strong statements to the Department. Receiver Laurence proposes to investigate all these transactions and it is possible that something unexpected may be revealed.

There is considerable squabbling over the Continental fund just now and great anxiety on the part of some during the time the fund is in transition between Mr. William R. Grace and Mr. James P. O'Neil. Since the company's failure the policy holders have revelled in sympathy and advice from lawyers, which now take practical shape in the way of bills for retainers, conferences and so forth. There is some difficulty in the way of settlement of one or two of these claims, which are regarded as exorbitant by the receiver and others. Mr. Morgan A. Dayton, referee, to pass upon Mr. Grace's accounts, has all these matters under examination and appraisal. Some of the attorneys, as well as Mr. Grace himself, left the question of their compensation entirely to the judgment of the Court. Mr. William Allen Butler was allowed $2,500 for his long services as referee. The stenographer's bill in this reference amounted to about $2,000. Allowances for the services of Receiver Grace and his counsel, Messrs. Coudert Brothers, have not yet been fixed. Messrs. Sewell & Pierce put in a bill, but have withdrawn it. Messrs. Redfield & Hill have furnished a statement of services for which they charge $16,000. This runs over a period of several months and covers a multifarious number of retainers, conferences, car fares and ferriages. This charge is one of those in dispute. On Saturday last Mr. Raphael J. Moses appeared before Justice Westbrook, at Kingston, and asked for an order directing Mr. Grace to pay over to Mr. O'Neil all the fund excepting $50,000, which was to be specially held by the Court for the settlement of these claims. Justice Westbrook said that the request appeared to him a little unusual, but he would take it under advisement for a couple of weeks. Meanwhile it is expected that Mr. Dayton will report in a few days and the necessity for such an order be avoided.

NIGHT BLOOMING CEREUS.

A number of botanists, physicians and scientific men generally assembled last night in the pharmacy of Dr. Richard E. Kunze, No. 606 Third avenue, to witness the opening of three buds of a night blooming cereus. To botanists the event is always of interest, as it presents the best opportunity obtainable in the existence of the plant for study and investigation. Then it is that the bud, after its twelve months of nursing, develops into maturity and gracefully unfolds its sepals, disclosing to the view a beautiful and fragrant flower ten to twelve inches in width. But its life is short. Scarcely has the fragrance permeated the surrounding atmosphere before the process of closing up forever begins, and slowly but steadily the petals fold themselves around the pistil and in a few brief hours the beautiful flower is decayed and gone.

The opening last night was particularly interesting because of the fact that three buds on the same plant opened simultaneously, a circumstance pronounced by Dr. Kunze as unusual on so small a plant. As early as seven o'clock the signs became certain. The buds were at that time closed tight, but bulging in the centre. The observers watched every movement and waited anxiously for developments. Soon a sepal, or in other words one of the outside leaves, fell back a trifle. Another quickly followed suit, and within ten minutes half a dozen on each bud had expanded. Next came peeping through the orifice a tiny white centre. In half an hour the sepals had all fallen back, leaving the petals exposed to view. The latter were all close together, brilliant in their whiteness, and resembling in shape and color a closed water lily, with the sea-green covering removed. Slowly, almost imperceptibly, began the expansion, first one leaf and then another, until at last all had spread, revealing the stigma of the pistil with its pretty greenish sprouts. At eleven o'clock the flower had attained full bloom and its appearance at that time was beautiful indeed. Then began the gradual closing, which usually occupies from four to five hours. The fructification takes place when the flower is in bloom. Ordinarily the plant blooms once a year, but frequently it happens that two years intervene between each blossoming.

The flower last night was of the Bonplandii species, so named in honor of its discoverer, Aime Bonpland, the French botanist, who accompanied Alexander Von Humboldt in his researches in South America. Unlike the ordinary night blooming cereus the Bonplandii emits no fragrance whatever, but its appearance in bloom is identical with the other species. Last night's plant is thirteen years old and came from Mexico. Dr. Kunze entertained the visitors with explanations about the plant, after which he exhibited several other species of rare tropical flowers.

TWEED'S COUNSEL SUNSTRUCK.

Mr. John D. Townsend, counsel for William M. Tweed, was prostrated by the extreme heat yesterday. He was removed by friends to the residence of a relative, his immediate family being out of town. The gentleman is believed to be in no danger and is expected to be at his office in a day or two.

HOBOKEN'S MISSING FUNDS.

An excited meeting of the Hoboken Common Council was held last night. A large audience was present, as it was known that the question of the deficiency of the City Treasurer of $97,000 would come up. Mr. Pfefferle, the former President of the Board, having gone into the slate business in Pennsylvania, there was nobody to take the presidency of the body. Mr. Cressey was appointed temporary president for the session. A petition was then read from Mr. Kamena's bondsmen which set forth the trust they still reposed in that gentleman, offering, if necessary, to increase the sureties, and claiming that the city's funds so protected would be safer in Kamena's hands than deposited in the City Treasurer's name in any bank. The petition was laid on the table. A communication was received from Mr. Snippen, president of the Hoboken Land Improvement Company, stating that, as one of the bondsmen and liable for forty per cent of any deficiencies that might occur, he would take the position of treasurer for half the present salary and bank the funds as the Council directed. The present salary of the office is $2,000.

KAMENA'S BONDS REJECTED.

The Clerk of the Board then read a report from the committee appointed to investigate the bonds of Mr. John Kamena, City Treasurer. It reported adversely on them. Considerable discussion took place concerning this matter, in which Counsellor Sullivan stated that it was a fact of public notoriety that Mr. Kamena was a public defaulter to the extent of $97,000. It was finally agreed that Mr. Cannon, the Corporation Attorney, be instructed to ascertain the solvency of the new bondsmen. On motion of Mr. Schmidt, Mr. Kamena was given permission to add to the number of his bondsmen.

The Clerk was then instructed to draw checks on the contingent fund to pay the school, police and city officials. A majority and minority report as to the alleged corruption of Alderman Ellis was then received and accepted, and after a heated discussion the session terminated, leaving matters much where they were.

THE SOCIETY OF DECORATIVE ART.

The members of the Society of Decorative Art have made a wise resolve, which is that their salesrooms shall not be open exclusively to women. "It is simply," says Mrs. Lane, the president, "the educational part of the society that it is proposed shall be for women's especial benefit." This is as it should be, for there are as many young men artists who suffer for want of a proper market place as young women. The society has started out with the right ideas. That there should be no division of sexes in this excellent organization was the suggestion of the HERALD, and the members are quick enough to see its force.

RIGNOLD'S RETURN TO NEW YORK.

Mr. and Mrs. George Rignold arrived in this city yesterday, and are stopping at the Everett House. Mr. Rignold expresses himself very forcibly concerning the charges of the proprietor of the New York Hotel, which were to the effect that he had left New York without settling his account with the hotel. Mr. Rignold states that he left under a direct understanding with the proprietor, as the latter knew that he was short of money at the time. Mr. and Mrs. Rignold will sail for Europe on Saturday next by the Germanic.

GENERAL WASHINGTON DESPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, June 26, 1877.

TRIAL OF DEPUTY MARSHAL FRANKS.

Deputy Marshal Joshua A. Franks, of North Carolina, who was arrested in this city some weeks ago for alleged malfeasance in office, had a hearing before United States Commissioner Plant this afternoon. United States Attorney Wells, of this district, and Colonel Lusk, United States Attorney for the Western District of North Carolina, appeared for the government; General S. S. Henkle and ex-Senator Pool, of North Carolina, for the defence. Colonel Douglas, United States Marshal for that district, was present. The abstract of accounts filed in the office of the Clerk of the United States Circuit and District Courts of the Western District by Franks was submitted as evidence. John W. Payne, the Clerk of the Court, was examined in reference to affidavits filed with him, but was unable to remember the amounts named in the original blanks. When Franks first brought the affidavits to him a blank was left to be filled with the amounts, but the witness made him fill the blanks before he would place his jurat on them.

Oscar Eastman, who wrote the papers, was examined, and also Senator Rodgers, a United States Commissioner in North Carolina. Rodgers cites many cases in which he said Franks had charged for expenses as Deputy Marshal which were never incurred. The examination will be continued to-morrow.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.

OFFICERS TO BE GIVEN CREDIT FOR SUBSISTENCE STORES.

WASHINGTON, June 26, 1877.

In a general order just issued the Secretary of War directs that subsistence stores may be sold to an officer on credit on his receipt for the articles and a certificate that the stores are required for the use of himself and his family, and that he has an unencumbered amount of pay due him sufficient to cover the cost of the articles enumerated. Subsistence stores may also be sold to enlisted men on credit for their own use, on written permits signed by their respective company commanders and approved by the commanding officer of the post or station. The above order is issued on account of no appropriation for the support of the army having been made, and is for the purpose of enabling officers and men to obtain subsistence stores. A similar order to enable them to obtain fuel, &c., from the Quartermaster's Department, will also be issued in a few days.

CIVILIAN EMPLOYES.

The Secretary has also issued an order suspending the order of April 8, 1875, which prohibits the issue of a ration to civilians employed with the army whose compensation exceeds $60 per month, until an appropriation for the payment of such civilians becomes available.

NAVY YARDS.

DIRECTIONS OF THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY TO COMMANDANTS—NO POLITICAL ASSESSMENTS OR TESTS—INSPECTION OF MATERIAL.

WASHINGTON, June 26, 1877.

The Secretary of the Navy has issued a circular directing commandants of navy yards and stations to conform strictly to the requirements of the navy regulations of 1876 and to hold all under their command to a strict accountability. Under these regulations laborers shall be employed in the several navy yards by proper officers in charge, with reference to skill and efficiency, and without regard to political or other considerations.

POLITICAL ASSESSMENTS.

No officer or employé in any of the navy yards shall require or request any workingman to contribute or pay any money for political purposes, nor shall any workingman be discharged for political opinions. (See Revised Statutes, sections 1,544 and 1,546.)

BOARD OF INSPECTION.

A board of inspection, consisting of a line officer and a paymaster in the navy, shall be appointed by the commandant of each navy yard from the officers in the yard, to serve three months, unless otherwise ordered. To this board the commandant shall, when necessary, appoint a third officer, to be taken from the department whose material is to be inspected, and these three officers will carefully inspect such articles as may be submitted to them, and shall report to the commandant in writing whether in their judgment the material inspected is of good quality, of fair market price, or according to contract, or furnished by contract. Should any member of the board make an objection to any of the articles inspected, he shall, upon the face of the report of the inspection, state his objections in writing over his signature, and in case of difference of opinion between said board of inspection and any paymaster engaged in making purchases the same shall be reported by the commandant to the proper bureau for decision.

WORK AT THE BROOKLYN NAVY YARD.

About one hundred men have been placed at work in the Brooklyn Navy Yard during the past week, which makes in all 332 men now employed there. It is thought that after the Fourth of July the number of employés will reach 1,000. This is owing to orders lately received from Washington to have the steam frigates Alaska and Brooklyn made ready for sea.

AMONG THE MORMONS

An Interesting Journey to the Southern Settlements.

MISERY AND DISCONTENT.

Horrible Disclosure to a Herald Correspondent.

A SECRET MIDNIGHT CONCLAVE.

English People, Deceived and Disgusted, Want to Emigrate.

"COUNSEL" AND ASSASSINATION.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 13, 1877.

Let us penetrate into the desert (dotted at long distances with settlements and surrounding green oases) of Southern Utah. The Utah Southern Railroad extends only seventy-five miles down from Salt Lake City to York station. Between the city and York three railroads branch off from the main line to the principal mining camps, located respectively in Bingham Canyon, in the Oquirrh or western range of mountains and in the Cottonwood and American Fork canyons, which slit the loftier heights of the Wasatch to the east. These mines, worked exclusively by Gentiles, are the only places of enterprising activity until the traveller reaches the recently located mining camp on Silver Reef, 300 miles below. A stage route from York to the Arizona border is traversed in the worst vehicles, with more discomfort, and, indeed, absolute misery to passengers, than any other I have passed over in the West. The scenery visible from it by day is combined of objects of grandeur and desolation. The Wasatch summits are dominated by here and there a peak almost surpassing the monarchs of the Alps in its altitude above the sea. Such is Mount Nebo, and such that giant which some wayfarer dubbed "Old Baldy" years before Fremont descended to the desert through a pass under its northern shoulder. Occasionally the desert narrows to a ravine, up which the roadway ascends tortuously to the summit of a windy divide. Upon the divides bitter storms descend, not in the winter only, but unexpectedly in spring and even in the torrid summer months. Nor do storms refrain from invading the lower plains, where the settlements are situated, and which sometimes spread out below the divides over spaces a hundred miles in width. From these tremendous levels the eye discerns on a clear day not only the white ridges of the Wasatch, but far off toward the Pacific the golden sides of the Sierra Nevada range. Herds of cattle and horses—the largest herds belonging to the Mormon Church—are visible like specks along the benches and in the valleys of scanty streams. The grass is thin, and in the hot season no vegetation can be seen but sage brush, greasewood and rabbitbush. The stage road is arid; the stations are sometimes twenty-six miles apart, with no water for the horses between them. Except when a Mormon Conference is held in the far away "Temple" of St. George few teams or horsemen appear outside the settlements. The only birds that fly are hawks and carrion crows. The wayside is whitened with alkali dust and the bones of hundreds of cattle that have perished in storms and thirst.

HOMES OF MISLED IMMIGRANTS.

An indescribable melancholy oppresses a stranger here, which is enhanced whenever he arrives at one of the solitary settlements along his way. At his first entry into a Mormon village he is struck by its contrast with the city he has left behind him. In Salt Lake there is so large a leaven of Gentiles and such an air of enterprise that he may have had few opportunities to inspect below its surface Mormon society or Mormon polity. Here he discerns the irremediable difference between true Mormons and all other people he has met. Here are the men and women who, enticed from England, Scotland, Wales and Denmark by Mormon missionaries, came over to America before the first Mormon pioneer train left the Missouri River for the farther west. They came at the sacrifice of family ties, old friendships and worldly goods. Some of them had property and money, others were penniless. But such was the fanaticism instilled into them that those who had means parted with what they had and consented to its division among those who were unprovided for. Most of them reached New York with an absolute equality of worldly possessions, and when they arrived at the Missouri River they were so impoverished as to be at the mercy of the Church authorities. Then began the journey across the Plains and through the canyons of the Rocky and the Wasatch Mountains. Thousands undertook that dreadful migration without animals. Husbands and wives, brothers and sisters drew on foot their own hand carts, which contained their bedding, extra clothing, food and a few agricultural and cooking utensils. They marched in this way fifteen, twenty, sometimes twenty-five miles a day. Often these marches were made without water, often they encamped without water, and spent whole nights awake, tormented by thirst. Their sufferings from extreme heat and cold were frequently fatal. Women pined away by scores. On two trips several hundreds of emigrants perished, and the brutal voices of the guards were heard each morning in the camps calling:—

"How many dead? Hurry up! Turn them out!"

The burials used to be completed by eight o'clock A. M., and the next victims trudged on with the train to fall under the heat of the sun and die before it rose again. Yet still the infatuated creatures advanced to meet the mountain snow storms, which, they had been assured by the Mormon priests, would, while descending all around them, leave a clear space in their front through which they might pass, like new children of Israel, between the drifts of a frozen sea! Though the miracle failed them the failure was explained away and their faith remained. Entering these deserts at last the survivors sustained themselves for weeks upon roots and a scanty supply of corn. They have ever since been almost completely separated from the outside world.

BRIGHAM'S IRON YOKE.

Imprisoned here alike by penury, by the oaths they had taken to the Church and by fanatical devotion to their Prophet, Brigham Young, they accepted a patriarchal government which required more self-sacrifice and unquestioning obedience than had been demanded under any previous theocracy on earth. The Mormon system, as strengthened and established in Utah, placed the people and all their affairs, both spiritual and temporal, under the absolute control of Brigham Young. He denies it in the interview which you recently published, in order to deceive the people of the United States, but it was nevertheless at that time true, and it continues to be true in respect to nearly all Mormons outside of Salt Lake City. In Salt Lake City, too, more than five-eighths of the Mormons continue to acknowledge this allegiance to Brigham Young. He is president, seer, revelator, translator and prophet, and he was then, also, Governor of the Territory and agent in charge of the Indians. Through a line of apostles, high priests, elders, bishops, priests, teachers and deacons he ruled in every household. In the first place he was and is believed to receive his inspirations direct from heaven. No matter what wishes he expressed, no matter what orders he gave, they were received by the people as commandments from on high. There was not, twenty years ago, a household in the Territory the names of whose members, their occupations and their opinions Brigham Young did not know. It is nearly the same to-day. In every settlement there is a presiding bishop, who has under him others called ward bishops, and each precinct of a ward is provided with a teacher, who, together with his assistant deacons, is privileged to visit every house and extract from the inmates confessions far more explicit than those rendered by Catholics to the Catholic priesthood. These teachers and deacons are at once spies and counsellors. What they espy is reported to the Prophet, and what he counsels is conveyed down to them for the guidance of those who are spied upon.

WHAT "COUNSEL" MEANS.

This "counsel" is a formidable thing. The word has been perverted by the priesthood until it has acquired a new meaning. A word of counsel is a word of command. When it comes from Brigham Young or from any of his delegates it is to be "obeyed," no matter what it directs. "To obey counsel," next to avenging the deaths of the prophets, is the most binding oath taken by a Mormon. Therefore, if counsel which is habitually rendered to the people in respect to their farms, flocks, herds, gardens, households and domestic relations extends so far as to direct them to marry, to obtain divorces, to disown children, to remove from one settlement to another, to do anything, at whatever personal risk or cost; it cannot be disobeyed without subjecting the recalcitrant to penalties always burdensome and sometimes atrocious.

"Counsel" has gone and to this day goes still further. It deals not with the affairs only, but the lives of those misguided fanatics. It has made of some of them murderers who have been nick-named "Destroying Angels of the Church"—assassins, who have shed men's blood for no other reason than because they believed what they did to be the will of God as expressed thorough His revelator and translator, who lives in a vulgar adobe seraglio in Salt Lake City. This sounds horrible; no doubt it seems incredible to many readers. But it is a mild statement of truths of which no one can become convinced who does not penetrate into the dark regions of Utah which I attempt to portray.

POLYGAMY AT CEDAR CITY.

The reader is thus partially prepared to attend me into one of the settlements squatted in the shadow of a great foot hill of the Wasatch Range. This settlement is called Cedar City. It was the home or rallying point of the fifty-seven Mormons who participated in the Mountain Meadows massacre. Many of those men still reside here with their families. A notch in the mountains, situated beyond the plain that stretches westward, leads toward the graves and the monument of the victims. The population here is mostly of English extraction. The Bishop, Henry Lunt, is an Englishman, who enjoys three wives and has begotten many children. He keeps the public house, where two wives live with him. Another house, further up the town, contains his third wife and their offspring. The wives at the inn are curiously situated. The first and oldest has borne no children; the second has given birth to five. Two daughters, Henrietta and Eva, are pretty and obliging.

"Now, sir," said the Bishop—whose accent retains strong traces of his birthplace—"let me show you one of the beauties of polygamy. 'Ere's my two wives a livin' in this 'ouse. There's Ellen, my first wife, who never 'ad a baby. Then there's Mary, who's 'ad all these children o' mine. Then there's the two oldest girls, 'Enrietta and Eva—see 'em! I don't suppose you could find more industrious girls anywhere. Well, then, after Mary gave birth to those two she began to feel sorry for Ellen, and she went to 'er and she says, 'Ellen, if ever the Lord blesses me with another child I'll give it to you.' Sure enough, by and by the other child came; that was 'Enry, the boy as you see this afternoon pitchin' the 'ay down to the 'orses. And Mary calls for Ellen and says to 'er, 'Ellen, here's your baby.' And ever since then, sir, Ellen 'as been the mother of that boy. 'E's old enough to know that she isn't actually 'is mother, but 'e looks up to 'er and obeys 'er just the same. And Mary don't interfere about it, and for all practical purposes 'e's Ellen's own child. Now, sir, isn't it beautiful? Can you find in New York any prettier instance than that of sisters dwelling together in unity?"

I was forced to confess to the hospitable Bishop that I couldn't.

This amiable man was absent on a mission when the Arkansas emigrants met their fate, and expresses the utmost regret for that catastrophe. So do his counsellor, Mr. Arthur, and several of his neighbors whose names are down in the black list left by John D. Lee. All these people naïvely speak of it as an Indian affair, and the rest of their conversation relates to their religion, farms and cattle.

A MORMON ROMP.

The Mormons delight in romps. The evening after my arrival there was a dance at the meeting house. A young German travelling through the country, with a small organ or melodeon in the back of his wagon, had stopped for the night, and obtained the Bishop's leave to furnish music for the ball for a consideration. The Bishop kindly took me over. When we entered the meeting house some thirty or forty couples were engaged in a galop which filled the interior with stifling dust. The young men were in their shirt sleeves, and most of them wore overalls stuck into the tops of heavy boots. The young ladies, whose faces looked scarcely less tanned and freckled than their partners', were attired in calico and danced as if they were about to break their legs. The clatter was tremendous. Some of the dancers adorned the performance with jigs. A cotillion which followed was rendered inexpressibly lively by the gyrations of three or four agile herders. Round dances are generally forbidden, and are never indulged in before a Bishop. I was, therefore, prevented from witnessing the rumored deportment of Mormon maidens in a waltz. On the following day, however, the youngest daughter of my host assured me mischievously that she never missed a round dance when she could get one, and that she could get one as often as she pleased.

A MIDNIGHT MEETING.

Late at night I was accosted near the Bishop's house by a man who had evidently been waiting for me.

"Are you the reporter of the NEW YORK HERALD?" he asked, in an undertone.

"Yes."

"Well, sir, would you like to hear something about our affairs here which won't probably be told you by the Bishop?"

"Anything new or interesting [illegible]."

"Will you meet me at half past twelve at that corner? and of course you won't say anything to the Bishop?"

Hesitating a moment I answered that I would meet him if I could, when he turned and left me.

At midnight the man who had invited me was at his post and led me in a direction and to a place which I shall not risk his neck by describing. In the room nine persons were visible by the light of a couple of candles. There were six men and three women, no one of them less than forty years old. All looked anxious and careworn, and one or two faces were extremely disagreeable. I was saluted with restrained civility and offered a seat by a fire. I remarked to my guide that he had brought me to a mysterious meeting and asked a reason for it.

"We heard you were coming, sir," said a grizzly old Mormon in the corner, "and some of us wanted to see you and talk with you. There wasn't any other time but this. If you know anything about matters in this country you must know it wouldn't be safe for us to meet you in this way in the day time. Yonder is a gentleman who will explain better than I can."

The eyes of all in the room were turned toward the person indicated. He was a man of some fifty years. His hair and beard were white, his eyes were gray and fierce, his thin lips quivered and his whole frame as he rose trembled with suppressed excitement.

"We want to say some things to you," said he, "which you ought to know—I mean which the world ought to know. But you must promise that you will not print or tell the names of those you see here or mention the house where you are."

"Since I have had no introduction," I replied, "I am not likely to mention names."

A SAD TALE.

"Very well," said the man. He then proceeded, as nearly as I can recollect, as follows:—"All of us you see here are what is called 'Mormons.' I believe we have all been in the Territory more than twenty years. We all came from England, where we were preached to by Mormon missionaries. When we got here we knew nothing about the regulations of the Mormon Church as established in Utah. Only two of us had received endowments and none of us understood about polygamy. Like all the rest of the people we were nearly starved here, but we did not know at that time that we had been robbed. Brothers and sisters," he asked. "I believe I am right in stating to this gentleman that every one of us before we sailed had household goods or money amounting in value to more than $800."

There was a general murmur of assent.

"Long before we arrived here we were like August sheep, shorn; and here we have been ever since, most of us poverty stricken, none of us receiving a tithe of the advantages and comforts we left behind us, and all of us now pretty nearly despairing. There was a time, not three years ago, when almost every one in this room accepted the privations and injustice which they had to endure, without a protest, and that is still the case with most of the people of this settlement. We begin to feel now as though things ought to take a new shape. Everything Bishop Lunt tells you will be smooth and clean, but you ought to know some of the things we have actually endured."

HORRIBLE ATROCITIES.

The speaker then went on, in very much the same style as that of speakers on the Mormon Church rostrums, to tell his story. He was followed by others, including two of the women who sat near. It appeared that two men present had been also present at the Mountain Meadows massacre and one of them told this story:—He said that one of the murdered women among the emigrants carried her child in her arms, and, holding it up before her toward a Mormon who advanced upon her, pleaded piteously for its life. The Mormon, whose knife was already red with the blood of several victims, actually spitted the infant upon it and held it, squirming in its death agonies, before the eyes of the fainting mother.

I relate in this connection another incident of the massacre told to S. H. Gilson, who is regarded here as the most valuable detective of Mormon atrocities who ever came into Utah. While the slaughter was going on a young girl of some sixteen years approached one of the Mormon soldiers, a boy about her own age, and, clasping her hands within two or three feet of him, begged him not to kill her. The wretched young fanatic told her he must do as he was commanded. But her face, her tones, persuaded him to relent, and he endeavored to save her. At the moment the boy's father came up behind him with a cocked revolver and ordered the boy to shoot the poor young girl. The youth bravely refused, whereupon the father, reaching with his revolver across the boy's shoulder, shot the maiden dead. At the same moment this vicious specimen of a Mormon parent exclaimed to his son—

"I wish the shot had taken both of you!"

The eldest of the two women present told, among other things, the story of her experience several years ago, when her husband, compelled by sheer penury, left Cedar City for Salt Lake to earn for himself and family a livelihood. At the time the settlement called Cedar City had, in accordance with the "counsel" of Brigham Young, been removed up to its present site, from the protection of a palisade on lower ground farther away from the mountain. A few families continued to reside within the palisade, where this woman occupied a small board house. One afternoon, as she said, she was visited in this lonely dwelling by another woman from the new settlement, who told her that she expected her husband would probably be killed that night.

[I wish to call your readers' attention to a horrible phase of "Mormonism," which is illustrated for the hundredth time by this story.]

DEATH FOR DISOBEDIENCE.

The husband of the visitor was, according to the account, to be put to death because of his disobedience to "counsel" in a case where his freedom of speech threatened the safety of the principal Mormons in the community. The man was already a prisoner. He had told his poor wife of his plight, and she, visiting her friend, announced it to her, and actually, before the expected deed was committed, began to converse about the arrangements for a funeral. More than this, while the two women were talking together a message came by a boy sent by the husband, stating that he was on his way to the place where he expected to meet his death, and giving a direction in regard to the undergarments he was to be buried in. So well understood was it that a death decree thus decided upon was final at that time that the wife did not dare to go anywhere and protest against it. So dulled were and are the sensibilities, passions, affections of the peasantry subject to this priesthood.

UNANSWERED QUESTIONS.

Surfeited with tales like these and with accounts from several who were present of their miserable dull lives I questioned them about their present plans and prospects. Those who deem it true that "Mormonism as it was" does not still exist in Utah will take the following colloquy, which I transcribe from an excellent memory, into their consideration. I addressed the man who first spoke thus:—

"You have told me all these things and you say now you are dissatisfied. I would like to know to what extent you are dissatisfied. Why don't you state your feelings openly? Why don't you and a great many others down here who are grumbling make your grievances known to your bishops and stand up for your rights? In fine, why don't you do as other people do who feel themselves injured and aggrieved—that is, make a fight about it? Why make so secret a matter of a conversation like this? You all look scared and seem afraid to speak of things. I have heard something of Mormonism on my way down South, but I did not think it had made men and women afraid to speak their thoughts and tell what they had to tell openly."

At this the grizzly old Mormon who first accosted me rose from his feet and said:—

"You don't know us yet; you don't understand our circumstances; you don't see how we are fixed here; you can't know how poor we are. We tell you, sir (I believe I speak for all the brothers and sisters here), that we would get out and go somewhere else if we could. How can we do it? We haven't money enough. Why I know lots of the brethren who would go if it wasn't for three reasons. In the first place, nobody but the bishops, their counsellors and a few others have much money here. We never get anything but what we get off from our fields and our gardens to live on. And even if we had the means to emigrate, where should we go and how could we settle down? What assurance would we have that we could earn our livings anywhere outside of Utah? Am I right, brothers and sisters?" said the speaker, turning toward the stove."

There was a general buzz of talk and assent for a few minutes.

A CUTTHOAT JOKE.

"Now, I tell you, sir," the old Mormon resumed, "that we are not going to give ourselves away to you or any other man. You have heard us like a gentleman, and, whatever you find out about us, you aint going to write any names. You are pretty curious about the murdering and all that, that was going on around this place for a long while. You've talked about 'obeying counsel.' I suppose I may as well tell you that if any one of us was 'counselled' to cut your throat before you went out of that door to-night he would do it as sure as you are alive."

This brutal piece of chaff seemed to be grimly approved by those who sat around. Further conversation, of no peculiar interest, lasted until nearly half-past one, when, parting from the singular circle, I repaired, accompanied part of the way by the aged Mormon described, to the gate of Bishop Lunt's house, and thence ascended to my chamber.

ARCHBISHOP BAYLEY'S ILLNESS.

For about fifteen years the Catholic Diocese of Newark had as its spiritual head Right Rev. Bishop Bayley, now Archbishop of Baltimore. The news that he is now at a Trappist monastery in La Trappe, France, suffering from mental and physical prostration, was received among his old flock yesterday with feelings of deep sorrow tempered with incredulity. At the cathedral residence in Newark yesterday much surprise was expressed at the news. Rev. Father O'Connor, St. Patrick's parish, said that he did not credit the story that the Archbishop's mind had given way, since when here he showed no mental weakness whatever. It was ascertained from another quarter, however—a medical authority—that when in Newark the Archbishop was exceedingly and unnecessarily nervous about his health, and showed much mental anxiety. He is suffering from Bright's disease. The report that in consequence of the Archbishop's unfortunate condition a coadjutor has been appointed to the Archbishopric of Baltimore is believed to be true. Before leaving for Europe the Archbishop drew his paid up $10,000 insurance policy, and was refused a reinsurance by the Newark company because of his manifest ill-health.

CUSTOM HOUSE GUILLOTINE.

Collector Arthur and Surveyor Sharpe were closeted together all yesterday afternoon conning over the reports made by the respective commissions of their departments, in relation to the contemplated reductions. Their conclusions have not been made public as yet. It is given out, however, that Surveyor Sharpe, having been in Washington, where he consulted with Secretary Sherman on the subject of the removals in his branch of the service, that he protested against the wholesale reduction of the force, as it would cripple the service very much. General Sharpe's representations must have had considerable weight, as he has been referred to the commission of which Mr. John Jay is chairman and ordered to submit to them his statement. In accordance with these instructions General Sharpe will meet Messrs. Jay, Turnure and Robinson on Friday, and settle matters with them. It is understood that the report of the two committees appointed by the Collector and Surveyor, give a schedule of the personnel, divided in three divisions—first the best men, second those of medium or fair capacity, and third the class whose valuable services the government can dispense with.

ARMY REUNION.

Meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic.

ENCAMPMENT AND COUNCIL.

Enthusiastic Welcome by the Citizens of Providence.

THE BLOODY CHASM STILL OPEN.

Treason Odious and Memorial Day for Union Soldiers Only.

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 26, 1877.

The day opened well for the army reunion, but during the morning it was extremely warm. The steamer Rhode Island, from New York, brought General Hartranft and his staff, together with Posts No. 2 and 5 of Philadelphia, the former coming as escort to the Commander-in-Chief and comrades from different sections of the country. Post No. 5 did not remain long, as they took their departure for Lynn, Mass., as was their original intention, to be the guests of the Grand Army in that place. They will, however, be at the Veteran Reunion at Rocky Point on Thursday. The comrades brought their mutilated colors which had seen service on many a hard fought battle field. Post No. 2 was accompanied by a citizens' corps, composed of many prominent citizens of Philadelphia, under the command of D. Stanley Hossinger, the Adjutant General of the State of Pennsylvania. Soon after the arrival of the boat the comrades sallied up into the city and took a look at their respective quarters. Before eight o'clock they returned to the boat and were subsequently met by Slocum Post, No. 10, and Prescott Post, No. 2, of this city, the former being mounted.

THE RECEPTION.

Before the line started General Burnside made his appearance in the depot, and the Philadelphians honored him with three rousing cheers. The General went on board the steamer and formally welcomed General Hartranft. The Department Commander of the State, Henry J. Spooner, and staff then made their appearance, and were introduced to General Hartranft and staff. Just as the line of march started a detachment of the Marine Artillery fired a salute of seventeen guns in honor of General Hartranft. It was a very feeble effort, and for some reason the report of the guns was not heard a quarter of a mile from the wharf. Carriages were provided for General Hartranft and staff, General Burnside, Henry J. Spooner, Department Commander, and Colonel Turner, Chief of Staff, occupying the first carriage. The march was a brief one, a halt being called in front of the City Hotel, the headquarters of the Commander-in-Chief. At various points the distinguished guests were cheered, and much enthusiasm and a very general desire to see Pennsylvania's honored Governor were manifested.

GRAND ENCAMPMENT.

Tha Grand Encampment and Council of Administration met soon after eleven o'clock at the City Hotel. The following officers were present:—

Commander-in-Chief—John F. Hartranft, Harrisburg.

The Council was in session about one hour, when the veteran associations marched to the hotel and escorted the Commander-in-Chief and the National Encampment to the armory of the Providence Light Infantry, where the encampment proceeded to the transaction of its business. The line of march to the armory was a long one, and the comrades suffered no little from the heat. Arriving at the armory, General Hartranft, in the plain dress of the organization, arm in arm with General Burnside, entered the hall, the band playing "Hail to the Chief." The officers of the encampment, together with the City Council Committee, headed by His Honor Mayor Doyle, occupied seats upon the platform.

MAYOR DOYLE'S WELCOME.

As soon as the meeting was called to order Mayor Doyle briefly welcomed the guests as follows:—

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC:—As the representative of the people of this city, and by the request of the City Council, I most heartily welcome you at this your annual gathering.

We thank you for coming here, as it enables us to express to you, however humbly it may be, by such hospitalities as we can offer, our high appreciation of the great sacrifices made and the patriotic services rendered by you and those whom you represent, in the preservation of the national government and national flag.

We welcome you as the representative of all these, wheresoever they may be, who, in the hour of their country's need, so nobly went to her defence. We welcome you also as the representative of that great host whose lives went out amid the shock of battle or who, on the march, in the camp, in the hospital, or prison, or since the struggle closed, have been mustered into the grand army on high.

We congratulate you that on this occasion for the first time in the history of your organization the flag which you preserved is waving over every State in the Union upheld only by the people and government of that State. We invoke for your comrade who has been called upon to guide the destinies of the nation the support of every citizen in his patriotic effort to unite in harmony and good fellowship all the people without regard to race or section, and it is our most earnest desire that when his official term shall close he may retire with the blessings of a happy and united nation from Maine to Texas and from Florida to Oregon.

We also congratulate you upon the great and deserved honor shown by the mother country to your comrade, the great captain of the age. And thus, members of the National Encampment, we welcome you to Providence with the sincere wish of all its citizens that your visit at this time may ever be remembered by you with unalloyed satisfaction.

When Mayor Doyle referred to the treatment of ex-President Grant by the mother country there was loud and continued applause, waving of hats and other expressions of approval, showing clearly that the guest of Great Britain was still held in high regard by the men whom he had so often led to battle.

GENERAL HARTRANFT'S RESPONSE.

At the conclusion of Mayor Doyle's address General Hartranft responded as follows:—

MR. MAYOR—It is a very great gratification to me, as the commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, to thank you for the kind manner in which you have received us as the representatives of the people of Providence. From what we have seen since we have arrived and from what we see is to come we thank you most heartily for giving this reception to the representatives of the Grand Army. Every member of the Order who has had the opportunity of coming here has done so with great pleasure, because all of us have served with the soldiers of Rhode Island on almost every battle field of the war. (Applause.) Perhaps that remark applies more especially to me, for the first commander of troops that I met a few days after the call was Colonel Ambrose E. Burnside. (The name of Burnside was received with great enthusiasm, and the veterans rose from their seats and gave him three rousing cheers.) We were both struggling at the wharf at Annapolis, each one trying to get his first report to General Butler. I remember him distinctly. I can see him there as plainly as I can see him now. I served with him during that service and I served with him, I venture to say, in more engagements than any one present, let him even be from Rhode Island. (Applause.) I think that in every engagement in which he had the honor to command I was somewhere near, under his call, and I look forward and back to the services that he rendered to his country as a great soldier, but still more as a true soldier, as a soldier who was always ready to assume the responsibility, no matter what the fortunes might be. (Applause.)

GENERAL BURNSIDE'S SPEECH.

General Burnside being loudly called for after General Hartranft had finished he said:—

COMRADES—We are on the eve of an entertainment which will be much more agreeable to you than any remarks I can make. I can only say I am very glad to see you, and I will have an opportunity to talk to you on the boat in a very few moments; and as you want to do some business, and, coupled with that fact, the committee want you to go on the boat promptly at one, I will not detain you at this time. I bid you welcome as far as I am concerned, and I know all the people of Providence bid you welcome, without regard to party or sect. They are all glad to have you here; they all know that the Grand Army, the Army of the Potomac and various army corps are to have their meetings in their midst, and I am sure it will give great pleasure to them to have you here, and we hope you will go away with happy reminiscences of Providence. (Applause.)

TRIBUTE TO GENERAL GRANT.

Department Commander James Tanner, Department of New York, then rose and said:—"According to the engagement as published, our old commander is dining with the Queen of England, and I wish that the Adjutant General be instructed to send the following to him:"—

General U. S. GRANT, care of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria, Buckingham Palace, London:—

Your comrades, in annual encampment assembled, at Providence, R. I., send heartiest greetings to their old commander, and desire, through England's Queen, to thank England for Grant's reception.

JOHN F. HARTRANFT, Commander-in-Chief.

The proposition was received with great enthusiasm and the despatch was at once forwarded.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNCIL.

As the session was to be a secret one General Hartranft politely requested all that were not members to retire. After the departure of the uninitiated the encampment assembled in annual session. The Adjutant General called attention to the fact that the gavel used at the meeting was made from the wood of the rebel ram Merrimack and that the piece of cloth attached was a piece of the flag at the masthead when she went down.

HARTRANFT'S ADDRESS.

General Hartranft then delivered the following address:—

COMRADES—At the close of another year we meet to review the past and take counsel for the future. I refer with pleasure to the accompanying reports. They exhibit a most satisfactory progress and healthy condition of the society and prove that its vitality and strength have not been impaired. An organization which draws its members from one generation must soon reach its maximum and pass away. The graves we decorated this year were more than we decorated before, but the living have closed the gaps in our ranks, and the Grand Army still presents an unbroken front to its silent foe. Under that enemy's fire our line will melt away, and our reserves must, in time, be exhausted. But that time has not yet come; the muster roll is still full. Rising from the mists of battle, the sun of the order still climbs to the zenith, and its splendor is undiminished. The clouds of doubt and distrust have been dispelled, and many who hesitated to join us from suspicion of our motives, or fears of being misunderstood, now swell the ranks of good fellowship, and find delight in the revival of old associations, and comfort in the companionship and support of old comrades. I have never taken part in these encampments without feeling that the society and its members were the objects of misconception and misrepresentation. We have been accused, openly or tacitly, of a desire of parading triumphs, of pushing the soldier into politics, and keep alive feelings of hostility. There is something ludicrous in thus seeing in the war a lesson of fear, rather than a lesson of hope. One fact established by the war is inspiriting to every lover of free institutions. It proved that our nation could rely upon the patriotism and gallantry of its people. It solved the problem of a strong free government, abolished standing armies except as a police, and returned to the old days of a nation in arms without falling into anarchy, on the one hand or despotism on the other.

THE CITIZEN AND THE SOLDIER.

It was also taken for granted that the discipline of the camp unfitted the individual for peaceful life. If arms were our profession there might be some grounds for such a belief. But war was an incident of our careers; we were soldiers as part of our duty as citizens. I do not think a man is a worse citizen for having been a good soldier. On the contrary I think he is the better for it. The promptness with which our people took up arms, their courage and fidelity in the field, the ease and safety with which they were disbanded, and the alacrity with which they resumed their civil pursuits, have often been referred to with surprise and admiration. But there is another extraordinary fact not the less admirable and surprising. The soldiers of the South, who know the cost of disloyalty and the futility of their principles, have also been the better citizens of that section. It is but just to them to say that they have gone to work with accustomed energy and fidelity, having learned to respect the convictions of others and patiently to submit to the will of the majority. On the other hand, the most pestilent classes of the South have been the non-combatants. The men of war promptly moulded their swords into pruning hooks, and their spears into ploughshares; but the professed men of peace fanned the embers of hate and have labored to keep alive the passions and prejudices of the past. It is evident that the olive branch in the South has been twined around the swords that were surrendered at Appomattox and Greensboro.

LESSON OF THE WAR.

It was not only by the cultivation of individual qualities of the mind and body that we were benefited by the war. We learned a lesson of deeper significance. We have passed through the valley of the shadow of death, and see clearer from the mountain tops beyond. The issue of the war was unmistakably the life or death of our nationality. We know now where certain doctrines lead; we know the results of certain principles; we are not now to be misled by false lights, nor are we to be lulled into security by the cry of expediency. Yet the progress of mankind does not go steadily and uninterruptedly forward; it has its ebbs and flows, the action and reaction of many faces. What this generation fought for and secured may be gradually lost by the negligence, self-interest and the indifference of succeeding generations. Another generation may have to fight over the same ground and for the same objects; but all will not be lost; they will win the easier because it has been once won. Nevertheless, comrades, though this war was fought upon so plain an issue it was fought in faith, in hope and in charity. We entered this contest with a loyal faith in the principles and institutions established by our fathers, we fought for four years animated and sustained by the hopes of victory, and we laid down the sword in the hour of triumph "with malice toward none and charity for all." Upon that platform we still stand, loyal to our nation, hopeful of its future and charitable to its foes. On the latter we would impose no restrictions which freemen ought not to endure or ask any submission which freemen ought not to give; we simply ask that they give up the pistol and the lash, concede free speech, a free press and free votes, and submit to the decision of the ballot. More than these we not ask, and the contest will go on, in peace or in war, until they are secured of all men. Our organization, then, is founded upon loyalty to the country. Beyond that it has no political significance. Beyond that it is an association of men, who here participate in the same victories and defeats, who have the same convictions and hopes, common memories and mutual sympathies. It is intended to perpetuate old friendships, to revive old memories, and for the mutual support and assistance of old comrades. In laying down the office to which your partiality has twice called me, I am glad to resign it unimpaired in honor and responsibility, not through any merit of mine, but through the zeal of my fellow officers and the interest and fidelity of all the comrades. Their reports will now be laid before you, and your deliberation and wisdom will devise means for the future usefulness and prosperity of the organization.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Reports of the adjutant general, chaplain in chief, quartermaster general, surgeon general, judge advocate general and inspector general were presented, received and referred to committees. They show that the Order throughout the country is in excellent condition and are full of encouragement to the comrades. The adjutant general's report stated that during the past year there was added

WHAT THE CHAPLAIN BELIEVES IN.

In concluding his report the Chaplain-in-Chief says:—

I believe in a fraternity which joins in indissoluble union justice and right. I believe in a charity which, while merciful to a conquered foe, does not stultify itself by surrendering the fruits of victory; that never forgets the brightness of that cause which has been made illustrious by the heroic sacrifice of those whose graves should be the shrines of the nation's reverence. I believe in a loyalty that acknowledges one country and one flag, that makes American citizenship honorable everywhere, that calls rebellion a crime, and the penalty of treason death. It is manliness inherited from those who have recruited the grand army of the immortals; it is a manliness which to-day beats in hearts which have known no throb but that of courage, which looks out from eyes that have been unscared by any wrath of war, that can be read upon the flesh in letters made by shot or shell or sabre stroke, scars that are the insignia of valor, a manliness that gives to every man of our membership, however humble, permission to wear upon his breast the badge of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The above was received amid no little applause.

MEMORIAL DAY.

A resolution was passed declaring that, in the service of memorial day, we seek to perpetuate the memory only of those who fought in defence of national unity. After the passage of the resolution the members of the encampment showed their approval by vociferous applause, clearly proving that the organization was not ready as yet to clasp hand across the "bloody chasm."

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

General John C. Robinson, of Binghampton, New York, was elected Commander-in-Chief. He was led on to the platform by General Horace Binney Sargent, and his appearance with his crutch—he having lost a leg during the war—was the signal for long continued applause.

Resolutions were passed thanking Judge Advocate General Douglass, of Rhode Island, and Adjutant General Beath, of Pennsylvania, for the faithful discharge of their duties, and a committee was appointed to prepare a suitable testimonial for each of them.

AN EXCURSION.

The encampment then adjourned for the purpose of accepting the city committee's invitation to a sail down the bay in the steamer Rhode Island. They were gone about three hours. A handsome collation was spread and good music added much to the excursion.

The city is generally decorated with flags, bunting and mottoes. Nearly everybody has tried to do something in honor of the stirring events of the week. The City Hall and other public buildings are handsomely decorated, and the City Fathers deserve credit for the interest which they have taken in the matter.

The following inscription appeared on one of the buildings, and it attracted the attention of General Hartranft:—

I fought against you at Shiloh, but got whipped.
Yours, JOHNNY REB.

Another was:—

The Blue and Gray are one to-day.

Governor Van Zandt called and paid his respects to General Hartranft as soon as he arrived from Newport.

All local posts have open house and the visitors are being shown every courtesy.

This evening there was a camp fire, complimentary to the visitors, at Howard Hall, which was an elegant affair. Previous to the camp fire Post No. 2, of Philadelphia, exemplified the work for the benefit of the Order. This was also a secret session.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

To-morrow will be devoted to the meeting of the society of the Army of the Potomac and societies of the general corps belonging to that organization. At eleven o'clock the Army of the Potomac Society will listen to a poem by Bayard Taylor, an address of welcome by Mayor Doyle, and an oration by Rev. A. J. F. Behrend's. In the evening a complimentary banquet will be given at Music Hall by the city of Providence, to the same society and a few invited guests.

STEAM CARS ON THIRD AVENUE.

The Street Committee of the Board of Aldermen were yesterday directed to make a report at the next meeting on the proposition to permit the use of steam for freight cars on West street. Alderman Bryan Reilly, chairman, stated that he would act with his colleagues of the committee only upon this subject. After the making of such report he would consider that his resignation as a member of the committee would be in force. The following resolution was also passed relative to the permission asked for by the Third Avenue Company:—

Resolved, That permission be and is hereby given to the Third Avenue Railroad Company and to the Fordham and Harlem Bridge Railroad Company to employ steam as a motive power for the traction of their cars, not to exceed five each in number, as an experiment, which shall be tried under the direction and supervision of a special committee of five of the Board, who shall designate the times and places when such experiments shall be tried: and the said committee are hereby required to report to this Board as soon as practicable the results of the experiments so to be made, together with such suggestions or recommendations as they may find necessary to enable the Common Council to arrive at a conclusion as to the practicability of a permanent use of steam on said railroads, or that they may deem of interest to the public: and be it further

Resolved, That all cars so used experimentally on said railroad shall contain a certain number of seats, separated one from the other, and when all are occupied the said cars shall not stop or take up any passengers until one or more of said seats shall have been vacated. When all the seats are so occupied a placard shall be placed in a conspicuous position on the outside of every such car, inscribed with the word "full." When vacancies occur it shall be taken down by the conductor. This permission to continue only during the pleasure of the Common Counsel.

The committee appointed under the resolution consists of Aldermen Cowing, Guntzer, Keenan, Morris and Slevin.

RAPID TRANSIT IN BROOKLYN.

A passenger train was run for the first time yesterday over the new Atlantic Avenue Railroad, Brooklyn, for the purpose of testing the soundness of the road. The railroad officials were very much pleased with the result and pronounced the road in perfect order. To-morrow trains will run from the Flatbush avenue terminus to Garden City for the accommodation of persons attending the laying of the corner stone of the Stewart Memorial Cathedral. It is the intention of the company to have cars running to all parts of Long Island on Monday next.

MUNICIPAL NOTES.

Mr. Joseph Seligman, the banker, yesterday transmitted $100 to Mayor Ely for the relief of the St John sufferers.

The Mayor and Aldermen yesterday received a communication from the Exhibitors' Association of Philadelphia, requesting them to forward an invitation to the Governors of all the States, who are expected to assemble in that city during the month of August, to visit the metropolis in a body.

A PHYSICIAN FOR CASTLE LUDLOW.

Sheriff Reilly recently received a communication from Mr. Sinclair Tousey, of the Executive Committee of the Prison Association, requesting the appointment of a physician at Ludlow Street Jail, who should be paid out of the city treasury. A resolution was yesterday presented in the Board of Aldermen giving the Sheriff authority to make this appointment at a salary not to exceed $600 per annum. At the suggestion of Alderman Purroy this resolution was referred to the Law Committee, as it is understood that under the Remedial code, which goes into effect in September next, the Board will have authority to appoint this official.

HARVARD--COLUMBIA.

Yesterday's Eight-Oared Shell Race on the Connecticut.

HARVARD THE WINNERS

The Defeated Crew Not Dishonored.

TIME, 21M. 37S.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 26, 1877.

Columbia has been defeated, and the magenta this evening flies above the blue and white. That the Columbias pulled a plucky race must everywhere be admitted. Every man of her eight threw his whole soul into the contest, and although her flag trails in the dust it must be attributed, not to lack of honest, conscientious effort, but rather to the overwhelming superiority of the Harvards. In a four-mile straight away race muscle and endurance, training and long practice in pulling together must tell. In these essentials Columbia was lamentably deficient. Her opponents have had all the benefits accruing from extended training and practice in rowing as an eight, while the Columbias were comparatively fresh in this respect, having never rowed together as a crew until Thursday last. Besides this they failed to receive their boat until Friday, and had not been over the course on "time" until within twenty-four hours of the race. Independent of questions of mere physical superiority these things are of telling effect upon a crew pitted against practised rivals. Columbia's captain is one of the best amateur oarsmen in America, as well as one of the best coaches, but neither his personal skill with the oar nor his experience in handling men could fairly be expected to accomplish much in the limited time before him.

For these reasons, which I have but briefly recited, the friends of Columbia must extend their charity. The boys of the Empire State did their best to uphold its honor. They pulled a gallant race to the very last stroke and lost it by a scarce three lengths—pretty close, sharp work for a four-mile race, won but by thirteen seconds. The friends of the Harvards assert that their favorite pulled inside of themselves and could have lowered the time materially. This is probably true, for it was noticeable that toward the close the Harvard stroke dropped to thirty-three, having commenced at thirty-five, and held at thirty-four over the greater part of the course.

UNPLEASANT WEATHER.

The day was dark and cheerless, with lowering skies and muggy, disagreeable atmosphere, dispiriting in the extreme. Whatever slight enthusiasm may have been manifested early in the forenoon disappeared as the day advanced, and the occasional dashes of rain that fell toward noon had a discouraging effect that was everywhere apparent. In the hotel lobbies and pool rooms small knots gathered and discussed the probabilities of the race and the further probabilities of it being rowed in a pelting rain storm.

SPECULATION ON THE RESULT.

The inactivity in the pool rooms was noticeable last night and but one or two sales were recorded, Harvard being the favorite. This morning a similar indifference prevailed on the part of buyers, and the pool men talked themselves hoarse in vain efforts to sell little sixteen-dollar pools—10 to 6 in favor of the Cambridge crew, and with even greater odds.

NOT MANY STRANGERS.

The early trains brought in fair loads of visitors only, but later in the day there was an apparent improvement in their numbers, but not to that extent that had been prophesied and that reasonably might have been expected. Rumors in circulation in the surrounding country to the effect that a postponement had been ordered may have had something to do with checking the attendance, and the appearance of the skies certainly must have given an air of truth to the rumors. Apprehensions of a stiff breeze were, fortunately, not realized. The wind blew steadily from the southward during the early part of the day, and it was feared that if it increased in velocity the result would be a roughness in the vicinity of Pecowsic, at least, that would seriously affect the time.

BEFORE THE CONTEST.

Columbia's crew kept to their quarters during the day, resting for the struggle before them, while the Harvards indulged in no practice other than a short spurt about ten o'clock, not far enough to fatigue them, but only just sufficient to act as a preparation for the afternoon. They fell into an easy, effective stroke, that was gratifying to a few of their backers congregated in the vicinity and encouraging for the struggle close at hand.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR SEEING.

The arrangements for the spectators were excellent. The grand stand at the finish accommodated fully one thousand persons, and transportation was afforded by numerous excursion trains which left the Springfield depot as often as they could be filled, and halted directly at the stand. The steamer River Belle, a stanch, fast craft, was provided for the press, the committee and a few others, the number being limited to 150 persons. Her capacity was greater, but the object was to render her light, under a contract made by the owner to keep up with the crews. Other steamers enlivened the scene. The judges' boat, the C. H. Dexter, a stern-wheeler from Hartford; the Yales' pretty steam launch and a host of sail boats and minor crafts that dotted the river in every direction clear along the coast from the start to the finish, and all of which were well filled. Spectators who preferred terra firma found abundant room along the four miles stretching downward to Longmeadow, though there was no point of vantage that covered a good, clear view of more than a mile or so. The height of the banks, however, gave a slight advantage at several points. All along the Springfield shore every place affording a view was thronged; the bridges, with their commanding abutments, being sites in special demand.

GETTING READY.

Four o'clock witnessed a temporary burst of sunshine, succeeded soon afterward with the usual dull, leaden skies, but, happily, unaccompanied by rain. The breeze continued light, and at the starting point the surface was no more than prettily rippled. Half-past four was the hour fixed for starting. It was sharp five when the Columbias launched their shell, and a few minutes afterward they came sweeping out into position with an easy stroke, followed five minutes afterward by the Harvards from their quarters further up stream. Both crews were cheered as they shot out into the river, and the ladies manifested their enthusiasm in the feminine way with waving handkerchiefs and parasols, showing the colors of their respective favorites.

THE RACE.

At a few minutes past five o'clock the two crews drew up in position at the starting line. They presented a widely dissimilar appearance as they sat in their boats. The Columbia men were very ragged looking, owing to the inequality of their height. They did not look hard and trained, and one could easily see that they were a crew that had not been long together. The Harvards, on the other hand, were the most magnificent set of men that I ever saw in an eight. They were immensely muscular, round barrelled and broad waisted, well browned, and, being evenly matched in height, they looked like so many brothers. Columbia won the toss and took the western side of the river. A long delay then ensued from the fact that Bancroft imagined that his stakeboat was too far up stream. The mistake occurred from there being a gentle curve in the river at this point, and as the Harvard boat was not pointing directly down stream it seemed as though the sterns of the boats were unevenly placed. They were not, however, and by the time the matter was settled a quarter of an hour had elapsed. At precisely 5h. 22m. 15s. the word "Go" was given. Both crews caught the water together and without any splashing started away down the course. Harvard began with 35 strokes to the minute, Columbia rowing 39. At once commenced a splendid struggle for the lead. The Harvard men pulled vigorously, but with a long, slow stroke. The Columbias, on the other hand, rowed quickly and nervously, slashing their oars into the water with a wicked, vicious cut, which soon showed its effects by sending their boat half a length to the front. This lead they maintained for half a mile. As they approached the old bridge, Harvard, reaching out with a longer stroke, slowly crept up, collared her opponents and then forged ahead. Both crews were pulling very coolly, and, with the exception of an occasional splash from the Columbia boat, the form was fairly good. At the end of the first mile the nose of Columbia's shell came quite up to the Harvard stroke. On the first quarter of the second mile the two boats were in most dangerous proximity, Harvard edging over toward the western shore and encroaching upon Columbia's water. "Harvard!" twice sang out the referee, and for a moment people held their breath, expecting a foul. Harvard pulled away again, however, and then, reaching out and increasing the length of their stroke very slightly, drew easily away from the other boat and placed clear water between them.

All this time both crews had carefully kept in the middle of the stream so as to avoid dead water and reap what advantage there was to be derived from what a correspondent last year denominated (facetiously, it is supposed) "the mighty current of the Connecticut." There is really but very little current; just enough to prevent dead water in the channel. Up to the mile and a half the Columbia's coxswain had steered a beautifully perfect course, but here he made a serious error. Instead of following the current he laid the head of his boat straight ahead for the opposite shore, while Harvard, rowing on the curve, passed across the bows of the other shell. Here the gap began to widen, and at the end of the second mile the crimson led by a clear length. All this time Harvard had pulled 35 strokes to the minute, never more, never less. Columbia's stroke was first 39 and then 38. At the end of the second mile it had gone down to 37. Her men were working tremendously, "two" and "six" throwing especial vigor into the stroke, but the pace was telling on them, and the gallant fellows were beginning to look distressed. The stroke, though still rapid and springing, was clipped and bucketing became prevalent. The Harvards, on the other hand, were still fresh, and were working away as quietly as though in a practice pull. From this point it became evident that the race was all in their hands. Columbia might struggle along as grittily as it pleased, but no efforts that they could make could do anything against the weight, muscle and endurance in the other boat. On the third mile the gap was widened to four lengths, Harvard rowing 34 and Columbia 37. Then Harvard suddenly eased up, and Columbia began to spurt. This closed the gap by about a length, and this interval lasted till the finish. From the beginning to the end Columbia rowed pluckily. They were outmatched, however, at every point, in selection of men, in style and in practice. For a short half mile she made a very brilliant race, struggling splendidly for the lead, and then from that on she had not a chance. To her credit, be it said, that when she crossed the line every one of her men were utterly worn out by the tremendous work they had undergone. No man spared himself, and if pure pluck could have won the race the blue and white would have been victorious. Harvard finished easily and without effort. She slackened her stroke to thirty-three on the last half of the fourth mile and crossed the line rowing well within themselves. The time was 21m. 37s.; Columbia's was 21m. 50½s. This time will probably be beaten on Friday in the great race. The proof afforded this afternoon that Harvard has a superb crew will cause the race with Yale to be looked forward to with more interest than ever.

By the way, at the start, the word "Go" was given before the steamer River Bell, which carried the press, had come down to the line. The hour was late, however. Many delays had occurred through no fault of the management, and when, after much toil, the referee succeeded in getting the boats into line he gave the word. No one who appreciates the position Mr. Van Duser occupied and the splendid manner in which he filled it will blame him for his action.

The wonderful little launch built by Mr. Herreshaff, of Bristol, R. I., was the only boat that kept within hailing distance of the crews.

Mr. H. Van Duser, Harvard, '75, was referee; Mr. L. J. Powers, president of the Springfield Club, the official timekeeper. The judges were—for Harvard, H. J. Harwood, and for Columbia, C. De Rham Moore. Messrs. C. A. Nicholls and G. W. Ray, of the Citizens' Committee, were in charge of the referees' boat.

The day was windy, and on any other course there would have been too much sea to admit of shell racing. As it was the water was by no means bad.

The Columbia crew will probably remain in town for the Yale-Harvard race.

The time as first announced was, for Harvard 22m. 37s., and for Columbia 22m. 50½s. Subsequently it was discovered that, through a mistake in adding up the time of each mile, the above was one minute too slow. That deducted, it was then given as first noted. The time of the four miles is said to be—First, 4m. 55s; second, 5m. 20s.; third, 5m. 45s.; fourth, 5m. 37s. Total, 21m. 37s.

YACHTING.

THE WILLIAM T. LEE, W. R. BROWN AND DARE DEVIL IN A SWEEPSTAKES RACE ON THE HUDSON.

The owners of the sloop yachts William T. Lee, of Brooklyn; W. R. Brown, of Newburg, and Dare Devil, of New Rochelle, have agreed to sail a sweepstakes race on the Hudson, off Sing Sing, to-morrow. The Lee and Brown have the reputation of being very fast, and the same point being especially claimed for the Dare Devil, which is new, the event promises to be one of the most spirited aquatic contests of the season. It has been agreed by the owners that working rigs, jib and mainsail only, shall be used, and that the canvas of each to be within a foot in all measurements. The course will be twenty miles—five miles to windward and return twice over. Shifting ballast will be allowed, and a margin of five bags may be lost. Each boat will be allowed to carry a crew of seven, and the owners are to sail their respective craft, with the assistance of an amateur in steering. The name of the latter individual must be announced and approved of before the race. Mr. John M. Sawyer, of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, has been agreed upon as referee and stakeholder. The prize will be a cup of the value of the stakes, $300. The sailing regulations of the Brooklyn Yacht Club are to govern, except as above stated or hereafter agreed upon. The steam yacht Ocean Gem will follow the boats.

YACHTING NOTES.

The yacht Dreadnaught, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Osborn, from the eastward, passed Whitestone, L. I., yesterday en route for this city.

The sloop Windsome, S.Y.C., Mr. J. H. Purdy, has been hauled out in the slip at Whitestone, and her bottom is being painted.

NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS—THE COMING OF THE IMPERIAL TEAM.

The Board of Directors of the National Rifle Association met yesterday afternoon, with Mr. N. P. Stanton, president, in the chair. The matter of entertaining the visiting riflemen from abroad, who are expected here this fall, was taken up. After considerable debate it was resolved that a committee of five, consisting of the president and treasurer of the association, the executive officers of the matches and two directors, to be named by the president, shall be appointed, and shall have charge of the fall meeting and the international matches, with full power to make such arrangements in relation thereto as they shall consider necessary to make such matches successful.

A resolution was adopted whereby the members of the National Guard, in uniform, are to be allowed, on the Fourth of July, the free use of the Creedmoor rifle ranges, exclusive of the charges for markers.

A letter from Lieutenant Holle was read, in which he complained that a lot of land won by him in the spring prize meeting of 1874 has been withheld from him by the so-called "firm" that offered the lot to the National Rifle Association to be shot for as a prize. The matter was referred to the secretary, with power.

Lieutenant Colonel Sanford introduced resolutions, which were adopted, to the effect that as the Inspector General of Rifle Practice had authorized certain alterations to be made in the sights of State rifles, the Adjutant General of the State should be addressed by the Board of Directors of the association, requesting that all the sights on the military rifles of the National Guard of the State should be altered to a standard position, and be officially adopted by the State authorities.

Major General Woodward, chairman of the Executive Committee, and Colonel Wingate, with Captain Casey, were appointed by President Stanton to act on the committee created by the resolution providing for the entertainment of the foreign rifle teams, and Captain Story was appointed statistical officer for the fall meeting.

Adjourned till the first Tuesday in August.

ROSSMORE RIFLEMEN.

The Rossmore Rifle Association, of Staten Island, held their third meeting at the range on Bennett's farm, Huguenot, yesterday. The firing was at 200 yards. The following are the best scores:—

S. E. Ellis	4 4 4 5 5—22
J. R. Le Roy	4 5 3 4 4—20
H. Mason, Jr.	4 5 4 3 4—20
C. C. Ellis	4 4 4 3 3—18

THE SCHUTZENFEST.

The New York Schützen Corps continued their practice yesterday in the pleasant Schützen Park, at Union Hill. The several targets were well occupied, and from ten o'clock A. M. until nearly sundown the crack of the rifle told of the earnestness with which the marksmen were striving to win. Among the many good shots made were those of Mr. William Hayes, of Newark, who, with a Ballard rifle, made a score of 18 consecutive twelve-inch bull's eyes, missed one, and followed with 33 consecutive in the black at a distance of 200 yards. The score made by Mr. Fenning of 68 out of a possible 75 was not beaten. In shooting at the eagle Mr. H. Knebal carried away the left claw, Mr. H. Wersebe the sceptre, Mr. G. Mencken the apple and crown (he was the last king), Mr. F. Wilms the right leg, Mr. W. Hahn the left leg, Mr. C. Mankin the right thigh, Mr. R. Faber the left thigh, Mr. H. Haase the left neck and Mr. G. Dochle the right wing. The attendance was large, and the ladies especially made an appearance that showed appreciation of the manly sport.

To-day, however, will be presented the most interesting portion of the festival, and thousands will doubtless gather to see the crowning of the new king and the various festivities that mark the close of the anniversary of the New York Schützen Corps.

THE LATE DOG SHOW.

WESTMINSTER KENNEL CLUB,
NEW YORK, June 25, 1877.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I beg to enclose herewith a letter addressed to me, as chairman of the Beach Show Committee of the Westminster Kennel Club, by the Rev. J. Cumming Macdona, judge at the recent bench show in this city. Its publication may interest many of your readers. Yours truly, WILLIAM M. TILESTON.

MR. MACDONA'S LETTER.

CHEADLE RECTORY, CHESHIRE, June 12, 1877.

MY DEAR TILESTON—Now that I have arrived back home, after one of the most delightful episodes of my existence, I write a line to you to express once more my most sincere thanks to the Westminster Kennel Club and, through them, to the great American nation, whose sporting proclivities they so well represent, for the generous hospitality they so kindly extended toward me while their guest. I trust my stay among you may add another link to the chain of affection that should bind in happy union two such chivalrous nations, so identified in race and feeling as America and England are. Your kind invitation has introduced me to many genial friends, for whom I shall ever entertain a very high regard. My visiting America to judge at your wonderfully successful dog show has drawn down upon me the adverse criticism and unkind remarks of an influential portion of the English press; but this and a vast deal more I am content to brave and bear, provided my dear and truthful friends the dogs of this and your country are benefited and their good owners pleased. With respect and admiration for you all, your noble people and grand country, I am ever yours,

J. CUMMING MACDONA.

FLEETWOOD PARK.

SECOND SPRING TROTTING MEETING—DAN SMITH WINS THE THIRTY-NINE PURSE.

The second spring meeting at Fleetwood Park began yesterday. There was but one trot, the other purse arranged for the day not having filled. The event that came off took five heats to decide which was the best horse of the lot. There were six starters, two of whom were distanced the first heat. The purse was for horses that had never beaten 2:39, and the first heat was won in 2:28½ by a horse called Dan Smith. He is a magnificent son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, out of a granddaughter of imported Trustee. Dan has size, length, strength and speed in quantities to please the most fastidious lovers of such qualities in the horse; and with a little practice at the game he played yesterday afternoon will be a valuable animal in the free for all purses. He is nearly sixteen hands high, a bright bay, and is so finely proportioned and put together that there is no part of him that could be improved.

Between the heats Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt brought his team of trotters on the track and gave them a turn around the course and several times in front of the grand stand. The horses showed speed of an extraordinary quality, and the spectators were highly delighted with the exhibition. It is very creditable to gentlemen like Mr. Vanderbilt, who have fast horses, to give the people a specimen of their quality on days when they are out to see fast trotting. Mr. Vanderbilt's team is probably the fastest in the country, or may be in the world at the present time. He handles them, too, like an expert.

The following are the details of the trot that came off:—

THE TROT.

First Heat—Dan Smith had his head in front when the word was given for a start, Mary Lamb second, Baywood third, Vulcan fourth, Fancy fifth, The Marquis sixth. Dan Smith and Mary Lamb trotted side and side down to the quarter pole, a length in front of Vulcan, in 36¾ seconds, Fancy fourth, Baywood fifth, The Marquis sixth. Dan Smith and Mary Lamb stuck close together around the lower turn, and at the half-mile pole Dan Smith was a neck in front of the mare, the latter one length ahead of Vulcan, who was six lengths ahead of Fancy, Baywood and The Marquis a distance behind. Time 1:12. Going up the hill of the backstretch Vulcan trotted past the others and led two lengths at the three-quarter pole. The race seemed his beyond a doubt at this time, and the easy and complacent air that his driver put on as he came up the homestretch led the spectators to believe that his horse had heaps to spare. To the driver's great surprise, however, Dan Smith began to close on him, and at last he had to resort to the whip. Seeing this Denton used his whip on Dan Smith, and the horse responded nobly, and to the amazement of every one, Dan Smith won the heat by a head. Time, 2:28½. Fancy was third, Mary Lamb fourth, The Marquis and Baywood distanced.

Second Heat.—Weeks then took charge of Vulcan in place of Haner. Vulcan was away first, Dan Smith second, Mary Lamb third, Fancy fourth. Vulcan took the pole on the turn, and, dashing away, led three lengths at the quarter pole in 36 seconds, Dan Smith second, two lengths in front of Fancy, Mary Lamb a length further off. Vulcan kept the gap open around the lower turn, passing that point three lengths ahead of Dan Smith, the latter two lengths ahead of Fancy, who was one length in advance of Mary Lamb. Time, 1:12½. Vulcan trotted steadily in front up the hill and was four lengths ahead of Dan Smith at the three-quarter pole. The latter, however, closed up the daylight gradually on the homestretch, but this seemed to be by sufferance, as there was every evidence that Vulcan could trot a good deal faster had he been compelled to do so. The time of the heat was 2:30, Vulcan winning on a jog by a length, Dan Smith second, six lengths ahead of Mary Lamb, the latter a length in advance of Fancy.

Third Heat.—Vulcan had the lead, Dan Smith second, Mary Lamb third, Fancy fourth. The latter broke up soon after leaving the score, and never made an effort afterward to overtake the others. Vulcan led a length at the quarter pole in 36½, Mary Lamb second, Dan Smith third, Fancy far behind. At the half-mile pole Vulcan led two lengths in 1:13¼, Mary Lamb second, ten lengths in advance of Dan Smith, the latter having been kept back for some reason not explained, Fancy fourth. Vulcan continued in front to the end, winning by three lengths on a jog, Dan Smith second, five lengths ahead of Mary Lamb, the latter eight lengths in advance of Fancy. Time, 2:34.

Fourth Heat.—Vulcan was first away, Mary Lamb second, Dan Smith third, Fancy fourth. The latter broke up badly on the first turn and was never afterward in the race. Vulcan led a length at the quarter pole in 38 seconds, Dan Smith second, two lengths in advance of Mary Lamb, the latter ten lengths ahead of Fancy. At the half-mile pole Vulcan led half a length in 1:13½, Dan Smith second six lengths ahead of Mary Lamb, the others far behind. Dan Smith broke on the hill of the backstretch and lost two lengths; but coming again he, after a fine struggle, beat Vulcan up the homestretch and landed a winner by two lengths in 2:31¼. Vulcan was ten lengths ahead of Mary Lamb, the latter two lengths in front of Fancy.

Fifth Heat.—Vulcan had the best of the send-off, Dan Smith second, Mary Lamb third, Fancy fourth. Going to the quarter pole Dan Smith broke up and Vulcan led three lengths at that point, Mary Lamb second, two lengths ahead of Dan Smith; Fancy far behind. Time, 37 seconds. At the half-mile pole Vulcan was two lengths in front of Mary Lamb, the latter about the same distance ahead of Dan Smith. Time, 1:14¼. Going up the hill of the backstretch Dan Smith trotted gamely, and passing Mary Lamb challenged Vulcan, and after a very close struggle finally passed him and won the heat by half a length in 2:36½. Mary Lamb was eight lengths behind, Fancy distanced.

The following is a

LONG BRANCH RACES.

An extra race of three-quarters of a mile for all ages will be run on Saturday next at Monmouth Park, and on the 4th of July an extra race of mile heats over hurdles will be added to the regular programme. B. G. Bruce, who is to manage the races, arrived on Monday from Kentucky, and he is quite busy in getting ready for what seems a most excellent meeting. There will be as many horses at Monmouth Park as there is stable room for, and all the fields will be large.

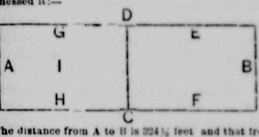
THE WOODEN BRACELET.

Strength and Agility of the Players—How They Bat and Score.

The field bounded by Sixty-ninth and Seventieth streets, Fourth and Madison avenues, was yesterday the scene of an exciting game of pallone. The field is not yet perfected, but sufficient had been done to justify the promoters of the game in venturing an exhibition, or "rehearsal," as it was called in the cards of invitation issued to the press and a number of influential citizens and distinguished foreigners. The exhibition given yesterday—which, though, according to experts who witnessed it, was not handsomely played—is sufficient to insure the success of the exotic game. At times the play is intensely exciting to players and spectators alike, and now and then, when for several consecutive bats the ball was knocked 150 feet from the striker, the applause of the audience was most emphatic. The players are all handsome men and display a perfection of physical development. Great brawn and catlike agility are necessary to the successful player of the game, and in both these requisites the six men who played yesterday are pre-eminent.

THE GAME.

The following diagram of the field and the accompanying explanation will serve to make the description of the game intelligible to those who have never witnessed it:—



The distance from A to B is 324½ feet and that from C to D 60 feet. The line C D divides the field in half, and on either side of which the players take their places as indicated by the letters. The players, six in number, are divided into two parties, reds and blues, and a mandarino or pitcher is added, whose sole duty is to deliver the ball to the striker. The striker stands at A, and he runs toward I, the mandarino. The ball is delivered, and he meets it midway between the points and strikes with bracciale or wooden bracelet, often sending it fifty feet in the air, the ball describing a bold arch and descending within a few feet of the opposite limit.

THE BRACELET AND BALL.

The bracciale entirely covers the right hand and extends three or four inches above the wrist. An oval opening through the middle enables the player to insert his hand with ease and grasp a crossbar, which is adjusted at the lower end. The outside of the bracciale bristles with boxwood pegs two inches long. Of these pegs there are seven alternating rows, and the instrument completed weighs about five pounds. The ball is five and a half inches in diameter, of stitched bullhide. It is distended with compressed air, pumped in after each inning.

AT PLAY.

Play opens and proceeds as follows:—The striker at A rushes with all the speed he is capable of to meet the ball tossed toward him by I. He whirls his right arm with the bracciale upon it, strikes the ball and sends it in a beautiful curve high above and across the line C D. The players on the other side, who are armed with the same bracelet as the man at A, meet and hit the ball back, for if it strikes and rolls on the ground the striker's side counts one. If the ball bounds but once it is allowable to bat it back again whence it came. If the fielding party should manage to knock the ball back beyond the line marking the field of the batter's side and it fall flat and be not returned the fielders count one. The batting party at A has great advantage in the game, for if he be skilful he can bat the ball in close to the high deal wall erected along the line KL, so that his opponents are unable to bat it back. To equalize the advantages the blues and reds alternate positions every second game, so that no decided benefit may be reaped by either side on account of location. Each fall of the ball counts one point for the party which struck it last, and when either side scores four points a game is won.

FINE PLAYING.

In the sixth game yesterday the play was magnificent. The reds opened the game with Guiseppe Cipollini at A, Egido Maestrelli at H and Damaso Maestrelli at G. The blues were distributed as follows:—Amadeo Beroni at F, Domenico Martini at E and Giovanni Vespignani at B. Cipollini struck the ball a tremendous blow and sent it in the direction of F, where Baroni met it before it struck the ground and sent it back in the direction of G, where Damaso Maestrelli struck it on the fly and sent it back again to Baroni at F. Baroni, thinking that if he sent the ball again to Damaso at G it might be returned sent it soaring in the direction of H, where Egidio Maestrelli, a brother to Damaso, met and returned it to Martini at E. Martini batted it back for a score, and but for the agility of Cipollini, who, rushing down between G and H, struck it, it would have fallen flat. The momentum acquired in the run, coupled with the great strength of Cipollini's arm, sent the ball beyond reach and a point was scored for the reds. A fine play by Baroni at F, who took a ball direct from the bracciale of Cipollini and sent it into the field of the reds, out of reach of any of the players, scored one for the blues. Twice Maestrelli (Damaso) at G drove the ball beyond the reach of the blues after they had returned it to their field, whence Cipollini had sent it. Another score for the blues and the game stood:—Blues, 2; reds, 3. In the last inning of this game a magnificent bat by Cipollini, who knocked the ball into the angle formed by the floor of the field and the fence K L, between the points C and F, secured the game for the reds. Sixteen games were played yesterday, and the following is the score:—

Reds	1 1 1 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 1 1 1 0 0—8
Blues	0 0 0 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 1 0 0 0 1 1—8

Owing to the approach of darkness the deciding game was not played.

BASEBALL.

THE HARTFORDS BEAT THE BOSTONS AND WIN FIRST POSITION.

The first position in the contest for the league championship had been held by the Boston club from the opening of the season up to yesterday, when it was handsomely wrenched from their grasp by the Hartfords, of Brooklyn, in a closely contested game on the Boston grounds. Following is the score of yesterday's game in Boston:—

Hartford	0	0	0	2	0	0	2	0	0	—4

At Chicago the champion Chicagos defeated the St. Louis club with apparent ease, winning by the following score:—

St Louis	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	— 0
Chicago	0	0	4	2	1	0	0	2	2	—11

In a ten inning game at Fordham the Rose Hills defeated the Witokas, of Brooklyn, by a score of 10 to 9.

The Volunteers defeated the Washingtons, of this city, at Poughkeepsie by a score of 12 to 1.

At Lockport the Rochesters, of Rochester, defeated the Buckeyes, of Columbus, Ohio, by the score of 7 to 5.

To-day the Hartfords and Louisvilles play on the Union Grounds, Brooklyn.

A DEFUNCT BANK'S ASSETS.

HOW A PART WERE SACRIFICED ON THE REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE AND A SPECULATOR BENEFITED.

The sale on the Exchange, April 13, by order of William J. Best, receiver of the real estate of the defunct Mechanics and Traders' Savings Bank, has raised a nice question as to the responsibilities of receivers, as well as illustrated the bargains that are obtained at the expense of poor depositors by speculators who, searching for improved property, "keep their weather eye open," and occasionally stumble upon "good things." The building sold is near the corner of the Bowery and Houston street, and was substantially built at a cost of $58,000. The property was assessed last year at $65,000. Real estate experts estimate that the lot, which is 26.10x70, is worth nearly the entire sum (viz. $27,000), at which building and all was knocked down to Meyer Finn by public auction. The sale surprised every one on the Exchange, and when Finn applied for his deed the receiver, in the interest of the depositors, refused to perfect the title, on the ground that the price realized was a ruinous sacrifice of the assets. Finn took the matter to the courts, and obtaining a decision of the Supreme Court in his favor, has acquired title to a property believed to be worth nearly double what he paid for it, and at much less than it would have realized on private sale. Thus it will be seen that the unfortunate depositors suffer while the speculator profits by their misfortunes, through his sagacity in watching chances in the market. There is no blame to be attached to the receiver, who contested the matter in the interest of the creditors without success. This case, however, illustrates the danger of forced sales by order of the Court of assets of insolvent corporations.

THE BURRILL TRAGEDY.

ATTEMPTED DEFENCE OF THE HUSBAND BY HIS STEPSON—MISERABLE EXCUSE FOR CASTING FORTH AN INSANE WOMAN—BURIAL OF MOTHER AND CHILD.

This latest domestic horror is one of those for which the divorce lawyers may primarily be held responsible. The divorce of Mr. Burrill from his wife was obtained in Utah under the Poland act for incompatibility of temper and mental disease. No papers were served on the wife, and the first intimation she received that the law had interfered with her marital relation was her husband's statement that a divorce had been granted. The Coroner at Sing Sing remarked to a reporter that in his opinion Mr. Burrill's cruelty to his wife drove her to the insanity during which she took the lives of her daughter and herself. Mr. Frederick Burrill, the stepson of the deceased lady, yesterday contradicted that statement.

A MISERABLE DEFENCE.

He said that their married life was one of the happiest description until the lady gave birth to a child, from which time she gave symptoms of mental derangement. Young Mr. Burrill gave several instances of the unfortunate lady's insane actions, one of which was her breaking furniture, cutting up her silk dresses, assaulting the servants, and in every way possible making those around her miserable and apprehensive of personal injury. At other times she would scream terribly when lifted from the couch, and the very next minute would get up without assistance and rush frantically about the house. These and other indications of insanity became so pronounced that Dr. Wilde, the family physician, advised Mr. Burrill to place her in an insane asylum, and she was for a time confined at Flatbush. She was soon taken back to her home and the insane symptoms reappeared. Finally Mr. Burrill resolved to send her to Sing Sing; but not being encouraged from the reports of her conduct while there he resolved to obtain a divorce a mensa et thoro. One week ago last Saturday Mrs. Burrill came to Brooklyn and asked her husband what he meant by suing for a divorce. Mr. Burrill replied that there was no use in them trying to live together any longer, but that he was still willing to do everything for her, and then gave her $40, saying, "When this is gone, let me hear from you." Mrs. Burrill, after some conversation, left him, and remained with her sister, Mrs. Randolph, on Twelfth street, until last Monday, when she returned to Sing Sing, and the next thing that was heard of her was the suicide.

INDEED!

This was a great shock to Mr. Burrill, who declared that notwithstanding the misery of their married life he still loved his wife, and he denied that he had anything to do with her insanity.

The family deny most positively and stamp as a malicious falsehood the charge that Mrs. Burrill was other than a pure minded and much afflicted woman. Such is Mr. Frederick Burrill's statement of the relations between his father and stepmother.

FUNERAL OF MOTHER AND DAUGHTER.

The funeral of Mrs. John Burrill and her daughter, Alma Haskins, took place yesterday afternoon, at two o'clock, from the residence of her husband, No. 408 Ninth street, South Brooklyn. The remains of the unfortunate mother and child were laid out in handsome coffins in the parlors of the house. A great profusion of flowers adorned the bier and filled the place with their odor. There was a very numerous attendance, composed chiefly of ladies who had known the deceased. Among those present was the little son of Mrs. Burrill and the deceased lady's sister. The services for the dead were conducted by Rev. Judea Gulick, pastor of the Reformed Church, Twelfth street, Gowanus, the former pastor of Mrs. Burrill. At the conclusion of the services, which were brief and simple, the bodies were borne to Greenwood Cemetery. The remains were interred in the Burrill family plot, beside the mound which designates the resting place of Mr. Burrill's first wife. It was the request of the deceased that she should be buried by the side of her second husband, the dentist, Dr. Thomas Haskins, but the brother of the latter would not permit her body to be interred in that plot.

WHO KILLED DIERCKS?

STRANGE ASSAULT AND ROBBERY OF A GERMAN TAILOR IN SUFFOLK STREET.

Edward Diercks, of No. 429 East Fifteenth street, died at Bellevue Hospital at half-past nine P. M. on Monday. He was brought there at ten minutes past twelve P. M. of the same day from the Thirteenth precinct, where he had been locked up on the previous night. The circumstances of his arrest and death are of a very suspicious character. The post-mortem made by Dr. Cushman yesterday revealed that his skull had been fractured and the injury had caused his death. How he sustained it the police, who have been investigating the matter, were unable to discover up to a late hour last night. Indeed, they did not know who he was until Jacob Meyer, of No. 338 East Sixth street, identified the body at the Morgue yesterday evening.

THE ARBEITEN BUND.

From Meyer's statement it appears that deceased and he are members of the Deutscher Arbeiten Bund, a benevolent society, of which Meyer is president and Diercks was secretary. There are some eight or nine lodges of the Order in this city, and a new one was formed and dedicated on Sunday afternoon in New Jersey. At three P. M. of that day Diercks, with Meyer and several other brethren of the Order, met in Z. Kloppmann's lager beer saloon, No. 7 Delancey street, and proceeded to New Jersey. They returned about nine P. M., and after a brief sojourn in the lager beer saloon started for home, Meyer and Diercks going out together. Before leaving Diercks called for a drink, and pulled out a handful of bills to pay for the liquor. He altered his mind, however, saying that he wanted the money and would hand the amount, ninety-two cents, on the following day to Mr. Kloppmann. Meyer and deceased went from the saloon to the former's house, No. 338 East Sixth street, and the latter remained there some ten or fifteen minutes. Neither Meyer nor his wife heard any more of Diercks until his absence from home was reported to them. They positively aver that Diercks was perfectly sober when he left for home, about eleven o'clock or a little later, on Sunday night. The police took him into the station house twenty minutes afterward, quite insensible. Officer King, of the Thirteenth precinct, found him.

THE STRUGGLE IN THE HALLWAY.

It appears from the statement of Mrs. Meadows, of No. 46 Suffolk street, that at forty-five minutes past eleven o'clock on Sunday night she heard sounds of a struggle in her hallway and then a noise like somebody kicking the floor. She put her head out of the window and called the officer, who entered the place and found a man stretched on the floor, apparently in a drunken stupor. He carried him off to the station house, where he was entered on the blotter as an unknown drunken man. The prisoner was carried into a cell and locked up for the night. He showed no signs of returning consciousness in the morning, wherefore Captain Copeland sent for Police Surgeon Fluhrer, who examined the man and recommended that he be sent to the hospital at once. The Chambers Street Hospital ambulance was signalled and came to the station house; but the doctor who accompanied the vehicle did not feel inclined to take the prisoner as he seemed to be merely suffering from drunkenness. At noon Captain Copeland had the still insensible man conveyed to Bellevue, where he died on Monday evening.

ROBBED AND MURDERED.

That he met with foul play is not doubted by any one; and this seems to be more certain from the fact that Diercks was known to have had $25, a silver watch and gold chain, two gold sleeve buttons and jet shirt studs with gold setting, which were not on his person when he was searched at the station house. Yesterday evening Meyer came to the Central Office and related the foregoing facts, strenuously declaring also that Diercks, who worked with him as a tailor, was a sober man habitually and was not under the influence of liquor on Sunday night. Captain Copeland and Detective Dunn are working up the case.

A $10,000 SEIZURE.

Captain Brackett, Special Treasury Agent, seized forty pieces of silk, measuring about one hundred yards each, and valued at $2 50 per yard, in the express stable of J. A. Dunlap, in West Forty-seventh street. The silk had been taken out of the original cases and packed into common potato or vegetable barrels, lined with waterproof cloth. The cases were also stored in the same place, and were brought with the barrels to the seizure room of the Custom House. Brackett recently seized a number of bolts of ponson silk, which he had traced from an auction house to the various purchasers. In this instance the seizure of the forty pieces was also traced from transactions of another auction establishment where this silk was to have been disposed of. The special agent will not divulge the name of the parties who are suspected of smuggling this silk, nor the ship upon which the contraband goods were imported. The barrels, he says, smelled very strongly of bilge water, and the strictest investigations were being made to bring the guilty parties to justice.

COLLISION ON THE HUDSON.

The steamship City Point was returning from the Fishing Banks with about 200 passengers yesterday afternoon when the steamboat Narragansett, of the Providence line, came out from pier 33 North River and struck her on the starboard side before the wheelhouse. For a while there was a scene of the wildest confusion, which was only settled by the coolness of the officers. Damage to the City Point probably does not exceed $2,000.

PREVENTION OF CRIME.

ORGANIZATION AND PROGRESS OF THE NEW SOCIETY—WHAT IT AIMS TO ACCOMPLISH AND WHERE IT WILL BEGIN.

The formation of a Society for the Prevention of Crime, which gives indications of formidable purpose and serious practical effort, must naturally prove of interest to all right minded citizens of New York. Anything of that sort, unprejudiced by fanatical or political motives, and directed by men of good standing in the community, will receive respect and support. The new society, of which the Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby is president, seems to be regarded in this light. In its communications with the Police and Excise boards an amount of energy and perspicuity has been displayed sufficient to commend it to the good wishes of all reformers. The President, who is absent in Europe for the summer months, has written a letter in which he recommends the society to his friends and the public, and asks their financial support, guaranteeing that the money will be used in enforcing the laws. Contributions may be sent to Mr. Benjamin Latham, treasurer, of No. 82 Beekman street; or to Mr. William F. Mott, chairman of the Executive Committee, of No. 83 Irving place.

WHAT IS INTENDED.

The last mentioned gentleman was visited by a representative of the HERALD, to whom he gave a general account of the society's progress thus far. He said that the idea of such an organization had been communicated to Dr. Crosby a few weeks ago, and fostered by him and his associates until the society now numbers fifty-two members. None but representative men who would give the society active support had been addressed upon the subject, and none others were desired. They desired the support of all good citizens, and expected to get it; and those who could devote some of their time to the labors of the society would be welcome to membership. As yet, Mr. Mott said, no formal appeal had been made to the public, because people do not understand it thoroughly, and the organization was still unfinished. The Executive Committee had appointed three sub-committees on law, finance and information. These will soon make their reports, and then more of the plans may be unfolded. The society has no agents at present, and does not propose to begin its campaign until completely equipped. Mr. Mott said the visit of Dr. Crosby to Europe was not at all in connection with this subject, but that his absence might in a small degree hinder the advancement of the association. Since the inception of this other and kindred societies had been started in Brooklyn and Jersey City, while others yet were spoken of; all of which, Mr. Mott believed, would cooperate more or less in future. They were anticipating, he said, some communication from the Board of Excise Commissioners which might assist in defining the character of some of their future actions. The new society was not a temperance league, though it had in view the promotion of temperance by regulation of the liquor traffic. It did not mean to go to extremes in any reform, but to be guided by the advice and support of liberal minded, well meaning business men. The reason for the society's slow progress was an over diligence to secure the assistance of only that class of men to the exclusion of "sticks" and fanatical reformers. They would be glad of any assistance from temperance societies, for their ends were to a certain extent the same. The society had already been assured of the co-operation of some of them.

THE FIRST POINT OF ATTACK.

Mr. Mott said the society of course attributed the greatest share of evil to drink, and looked upon the indiscriminate sale of liquors as the most fruitful source of crime. They deplored the condition of that traffic in this city, and believed unless regulated it would lead to very serious demoralization. Statistics from the Island prisons show, he said, that seventeen-twentieths of the poverty and misery there witnessed came from liquor. The society had no Cotter in its service, but it had asked the Board of Excise Commissioners for lists of licensed liquor dealers, and proposed to begin the fight on the weakest point of the line—viz., against those who were selling without any license whatever. There are hundreds of such places in New York, he said, and the society would take up their cases first because they were entirely defenceless. It was in such places that the very worst sort of liquor was sold, and sold at rates perhaps a little lower than the licensed trade. Mr. Mott said that the society wished to enforce a strict reading of the Excise laws, and believed this accomplishment would lead to great beneficial results. There was a shameful laxity in these regulations at present, to which the society intended to devote its first attention. As to other and future movements for the prevention of crime in this city the policy of the society would be shaped as it progressed. He thought that before July 15 the matter would be in such a form as to render expedient a meeting of the public, to whom the real character and objects of the new association might be made known.

MILLIONS IN IT.

MEETING OF THE HEIRS AND CO-HEIRS OF THE SHEPHARD ESTATE.

The glitter of gold which has been brought before the mind's eye of the heirs and co-heirs of the alleged $12,000,000 of the Shephard estate, in the Bank of England, the details of which claim have been fully published in the HERALD, had the effect of attracting a large number of claimants to another meeting last evening. The meeting, which was called by Mr. G. W. Northridge, who has been empowered to superintend the preliminary movements looking to the recovery of the estate was held at No. 68 Court street, Brooklyn. The assemblage numbered about thirty persons, among whom were nine or ten females and three infants in arms. The office in which they met was small, and the absence of ventilation was such as to make it a cause of congratulation, among the disinterested spectators at all events, when the proceedings, which were decidedly informal, were brought to a close.

Mr. Northridge, who has been investigating the subject, read a paper to the effect that Richard, John and Robert Shephard had deposited $12,000,000 in the Bank of England for their heirs and next of kin. The three Shephards named had a nephew, Thomas, who, about sixty years ago, married a Miss Hadden, of Welles, Sommersetshire county, England. Thomas and Alice had ten children who came to the United States and the greater number of them married. Two-thirds of these ten children had issue, making the total number of heirs thirty-eight. Thirty-one of the heirs are now surviving, and these have twenty-one grandchildren. Mr. Northridge said the heirs of Thomas Shephard are all right. Their claim is clearly established.

This announcement had the effect of bringing a quaint looking old lady, who hailed from Comac, Long Island, to her feet, and she cried aloud:—

"That's my father! That's my father! I am all right."

The other heirs laughed at the excited and venerable daughter of Thomas Shephard, who thereupon subsided.

The question arose as to the propriety of permitting the reporters to be present at the meetings. Considerable opposition was developed against the presence of the members of the press. One gentleman said he lived in Brooklyn and had been called out of bed in the middle of the night to undergo an interview by a reporter. The good old dame from Comac said:—

"They ain't none of them, been down to see me yet, I take notice."

Mr. Northridge said new heirs were now wanted for William, Alice, Jacob, John, Mary, Susannah, Rachel and Elizabeth Shephard. It is necessary that they should all be got together before their united claims for the estate could be securely established. He urged each claimant present to write out as fully as possible a statement of his or her pedigree and to hand it in to him. He also suggested that a little money should be subscribed toward hiring a hall.

A rather dilapidated male heir thought they should keep the thing more to themselves and no persons should be admitted unless they could, as he put it, "identify themselves."

The meeting adjourned, subject to the call of Mr. Northridge.

A DRUGGIST'S FATAL MISTAKE.

Another fatal mistake on the part of a druggist occurred yesterday in Jersey City. The wife of Adolph Luff, a baker, living in Monticello avenue, with her infant, three weeks old, having both been ill for some days past were attended by Dr. Viers, who prescribed morphine powders for the mother and a powder of a simple character for the child. The prescriptions were compounded at the drug store of C. Maskiell, in Monticello avenue. On Monday evening it was deemed best to continue the same treatment in the case of the infant, and the nurse was sent to the drug store to have the same powders repeated. Not knowing which box the baby's powders came in at first the nurse says she took both boxes, and, handing them to the drug clerk, told him to put up the same kind of powders the child had been given before. The clerk, after selecting one of the two boxes, prepared the powders which were taken home and one of them administered to the little patient. A few minutes afterward Mr. Maskiell himself rushed into the house and asked if any of the powders had been given to the child, and on being answered in the affirmative he hastened back to his store and returned in a few minutes with an emetic, which was given; however, without avail. Drs. Viers and Forman were then speedily sent for and had immediate recourse to the stomach pump and other means, but the child lingered in agony until yesterday morning, when it expired. The druggist claims that the mistake should not be charged to either himself or his clerk, and says that the nurse brought only one box—that which had contained the morphine powders used by the mother, and that on returning to the store and learning of the prescription having been put up, it occurred to him that a mistake had been made. Both boxes were missing from the sick room yesterday, and it is stated that the druggist took them away when he left the house on Monday evening.

THE GREENVILLE SUICIDE.

August Thau, a well known and prosperous resident of the Greenville District of Jersey City, placed a revolver to his head, two weeks ago, and fired a bullet through his right ear. He lingered from day to day and so far recovered that he was able to walk abroad, but death ensued on Monday evening. He had been unconscious three days previous to his death.

WALL STREET YESTERDAY.—The stock market continued stagnant and without interest, except the weakness in railroads caused by the decline in Michigan Central. Gold opened at 105⅜ and closed at 105⅛. Government and railroad bonds were lower. Money on call was easy at 1 a 2 per cent.

DESPATCHES FROM THE COAL REGIONS announce another murder by the Molly Maguires. The scaffold will have to be again erected if Molly Maguirism is to be crushed out.

THE ALDERMEN have agreed to allow the small boy full liberty to burn, blast and blow himself and his friends into eternity on the 3d and 4th of July. Life and property have no rights which the Aldermen and the small boy are bound to respect.

STARTLING REVELATIONS are promised in the case of the defunct American Popular Life Insurance Company. There is reason to believe that the company was practically bankrupt four years ago, but its officers were expert accountants and managed to show balances which existed only in imagination.

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY THOMPSON has begun the work of reform in the navy yards. In future no appointments or discharges shall be made for purely political reasons, and no political assessments will be allowed. Existing laws and regulations, to be sure, command all these things to be done, but they have been ignored for the purpose of helping the party and carrying close Congressional districts. Democrats violated the law as well as republicans. The administration evidently means that we shall have civil service reform in fact as well as in name.

THE COLLECTOR OF THE PORT of Baltimore, Colonel Wilkins, refuses to be removed by the President and is supported in his determination by what is known as the Creswell wing of the republican party in Maryland. He was an extreme republican during the war, going so far as to offer a resolution in the Legislature prohibiting Marylanders who joined the Confederacy from returning to the State. The whole thing is simply a quarrel between the two State factions in the republican party, Thomas, who has been selected as Wilkins' successor, being a member of what is known as the Fulton ring. It is purely a fight for patronage.

MORMON INIQUITY.—Our correspondent, who has been instructed to investigate and expose the crime and iniquity of Mormonism, sends a graphic letter, printed this morning, descriptive of a journey into the comparatively unknown, and unexplored parts of Southern Utah. The unfortunate victims of Brigham Young's duplicity who have been induced to settle there are, it appears, held by him in the most galling bondage—a bondage from which there is hardly a means of escape. They are to all intents and purposes the slaves of Young—slaves in soul as well as body. The horrors of Mormonism are in some measure mitigated in Salt Lake City, but in the country through which our correspondent is making his perilous journey the twin relic of barbarism is seen in all its deformity.

THE WEATHER.—The disturbances that have passed over so large an area of the West have caused considerable damage to the crops. A very general rainfall has saturated the ground and caused the overflow of the rivers in some sections. The tornado winds that have attended the heavy rains have prostrated growing grain and destroyed a good deal of timber. In the Illinois vine district, our despatches state, a vast amount of damage has been done, which will materially affect this year's grape crop. The depression which on Monday was central between the Mississippi and the Missouri has already reached the Middle Atlantic coast as a barometric trough. Its eastward movement developed several heavy storms, one of which passed last evening over Pennsylvania and New York States. We experienced its effects in the city toward night in heavy rain and a decided fall of temperature after midnight. The low barometer which reached the Nova Scotia coast at the latter end of the week was attended by violent winds in that region, which caused considerable damage to the fishing fleet. The rains yesterday extended northward from Tennessee and from the Mississippi to the Atlantic coast. Quite a heavy local fall occurred in Eastern Texas. The pressure is now highest in the Gulf and South Atlantic States, and is lowest in the lower lake region and Middle States. The pressure is rising on the Pacific coast. The differences of temperature were very marked on the Atlantic coast northward from Sandy Hook and favored the development of such storms as passed northeastward during the evening. The weather in New York to-day will be cooler and cloudy or partly cloudy, possibly with light showers.

The Herald and the Partisans.

We learn from various authentic sources that the political course of the HERALD displeases most of the prominent and influential democratic and republican politicians. Some of them do not hesitate to speak of our journal as a detestable and disorganizing sheet; they complain that its hand is against every man—meaning that it impartially exposes the schemes of the politicians of both sides; and they assert that it recklessly tries to break up parties, and leads the people not only to distrust, but even to despise their political leaders. They point out, with bitterness, numerous instances in which the HERALD has brought to naught their designs, and they complain that nobody can tell a week or even a day beforehand which party it will next attack.

We admit, with pride, that this is all true. Judged from a partisan point of view the HERALD no doubt is, as it always has been, and always means to be, a purely mischievous and mischief making journal. We confess frankly that no party leader of either side ought to put his confidence in it, for it is pretty certain to trip up his heels the first time he is in the wrong. As a party organ it is, to use a piece of political slang, an extremely "unsafe" journal, and deserves the severest denunciations of the "war horses." It must always be alike odious to democratic and republican managers—and this because it is really the organ of another and far more important class—the people, namely.

The HERALD is the organ of the independent voters, and the independent voters are the natural enemies of the war horses and machine politicians. The HERALD's duty is to defend the rights of the people against the plots and schemes of the partisans; hence it exposes the self-seeking of political managers of both sides, and it is quite natural that these should hate it and watch it with constant alarm. These gentlemen regard a newspaper as one of the tools of their trade. When a man sets up in politics his first object is to lay in a newspaper, just as when another man sets up as a burglar he begins by buying a kit of jimmies and skeleton keys. With the help of an organ he scatters abroad political misinformation, and appeals to the fears, the resentments, the prejudices of the people, in order to turn these to his own use. Hence politicians regard a public journal as properly an organ of the opinions of one party or the other, and when they find one which bears no such allegiance they resent its existence as something out of the natural order of things; as disorderly and dangerous. Faithfulness to party is their highest ideal of public virtue, and they cannot see with patience a man or a journal supporting or opposing now one and now the other side, as either is right or wrong. It seems to them inconsistent.

We need not tell our readers that the HERALD has no sympathy with these narrow views of the functions of journalism or the nature of public virtue. The newspaper, in our view, is bound to give its readers the news, all the news, impartially and correctly. Thus it enables them to form a judgment of their own on public affairs. In its discussions its true aim should be to help the public to a correct opinion, and it is bound always, and at all hazards, to defend the public interest; the rights, the security and welfare of the people. But if it does this it must necessarily attack and expose all who endeavor to subordinate public to private interests; and it will be hated and will be denounced as inconsistent by all who find themselves thus opposed. To-day it praises and supports a public man or party for a sound and patriotic course; next week or next month it attacks him for a blunder or a selfish scheme. To him it is certainly a demoralizing journal; by the great public, whose interests it defends, it is seen to be entirely consistent, and it is because the public has learned to trust the HERALD, because it knows it to be fearless and faithful to the country's interests, that its support is so eagerly sought and its opposition is so greatly feared and bitterly resented by the partisan politicians.

We have often expressed the belief that American journalism would presently rise above the "party organ" level, and that all journals whose conductors hoped to exercise a real and lasting influence upon public affairs would liberate themselves from party trammels. This reform goes on more slowly than is desirable, but it is a fact universally recognized that the journals of real and wide influence in the country, whose opinions are looked for and whose favor is most anxiously desired by the politicians, are precisely those which are most conspicuously independent of party allegiance. It is even true that a party organ gains in influence in the degree in which it shows itself possessed of courage to resist on occasion the dictation of its political masters.

It is not the office of an independent journal to interfere in party nominations or policies. It cares not which party succeeds, but it demands a sound policy, a patriotic course, from both sides. It condemns bad nominations and foolish policies, it praises and supports wise, patriotic and sound conduct, no matter on which side these are found. A journal which faithfully does this service presently secures a strong and lasting hold on the public confidence; it has not only a wide but an attentive audience; it wields an influence on public opinion which the partisan politicians very rightly fear, because it either compels them to right conduct or leads the people to punish them for wrongdoing. There was hardly ever a period in our history when the influence of the few really independent journals in the country was so great or so important as during the last eventful and exciting year, and there never was a time when the independent press had so powerful a hold upon the public mind. It moderated the extreme and dangerous partisan fury; it compelled both parties to abate something of their unpatriotic designs and preposterous pretensions; and it is not extravagant to say that the few independent journals really saved the country from the calamity of a civil war, to which the partisan sheets of both sides vehemently egged it on.

Thus the HERALD last year opposed and denounced the gross and unconstitutional federal interference in Southern elections, and at once incurred the hatred of the republican politicians. It censured next the silly threats of resistance by Northern democrats, and of course was denounced by these imbeciles. It demanded the formation of an electoral commission to decide peaceably and in an orderly manner the disputed election, and behold, once more the republican politicians abused us. But the commission being formed against the opposition of the republican demagogues, the HERALD insisted that its verdict should be accepted as final, and the democratic demagogues took once more their turn to spitefully attack us. Both sides declared the HERALD inconsistent; but the great public, the people, the body of independent voters, who are not seeking office, but who want peace, constitutional government, order and decency—these knew that the HERALD was consistent throughout; that its object was to prevent the demagogues of both sides from plunging us into a disgraceful civil struggle. And we may as well say that the independent voters have been faithful to their organ; we are not dissatisfied with them.

Then came the new policy, denounced by the leaders of both parties, heartily approved at once by the HERALD and other independent journals, and by the mass of the people. The politicians, democratic and republican alike, hate the President's policy because they see that it gives the country peace and brings forward new and important questions. The party organs of both sides tamely follow the lead of their masters. Once more the independent press speaks the voice of the people, who do not care what becomes of parties, but look to the welfare of the whole country. The two parties are dead. The President's wise and patriotic policy knocked the life out of them. There are still a parcel of political ghosts materializing here and there about the country, and as they glide out of their cupboards they make faces at the HERALD. But making faces will not save them.

Progress of the War.

The great feature of the war news to-day is the bombardment of Rustchuk, the cover, of course, to ulterior operations; for it is not even necessary to give the Russians credit for humanity or any other quality than economy in order to understand that they are not wasting powder for the sake of the destructive effect of their gunnery in this wretched Turkish town. There can be little doubt that this bombardment is a cover to another passage of the Danube which has been actually made by the Russian right at Rahova. Evidently, however, the Russians have poured so hot a fire upon Rustchuk that the people there may have felt for some hours as uncomfortable as all the people of the wretched Bulgarian villages felt last year under the operation of the favors of the bashi-bazouks. If people happen to remember the events of last year it will be found difficult to get up any extensive sympathy over the fact that the Turks now have reason to know how it is themselves. In fact, it will be rather amusing to note their grimaces, and certainly the appearance of the Turk in the rôle of an injured innocent, holding up his hand and calling upon the world to come and witness the inhumanity of the Russians is droll. In Ardahan they say the Russians committed great outrages, and now they have gone so far in the bombardment of a city that the tender-hearted, pitying Turk has actually let everybody out of the prisons rather than keep them there exposed to the Russian fire. It is rather bad for the Ottoman record in the article of mercy that it never yet benefited anybody but a few rogues in jail; while all the world knows that a bombardment, though it is a noisy and unpleasant infliction, is a mild misery compared to what would be endured by the people of any Russian town that should find itself at the mercy of any Ottoman commander. Our despatches show that the number of Russians now in the Dobrudscha and pushing forward against Tchernavoda is thirty thousand. If that is a diversion for the operation of crossing the river above Rustchuk it must certainly accomplish its purpose of attracting to itself a considerable share of Turkish attention. The feeling against Redif Pacha, the Minister of War, is certainly on the increase in Constantinople, and another revolution is the imminent result.

The Two Dorsheimers.

New York is happy in the possession of two Dorsheimers. One publicly exalts poor Mr. Tilden to the skies as the noblest and wisest of mankind; the other privately describes him as no better than a blunderer and even speaks of his "physical appearance," but allows him to be "an interesting person" with a bad habit of procrastination.

New York staggered under one Dorsheimer; what will it do with two? It is dreadful to think of. Let us hope that there are not two, after all. Let us hope that there are two single gentlemen rolled into one. Let us hope it is a case like that of Mr. Orator Puff, who had two tones to his voice. But we hereby give notice that if New York shall be found to contain two Dorsheimers we will immediately lend one to the New Jersey republicans to run for Governor if Mr. Robeson should decline.

Did we hear somebody say that the democratic party is not dead?

Tornadoes and Rains.

All the region west of the Alleghany Mountains and northward of Tennessee, but chiefly the Lower Ohio Valley and the trans-Mississippi States, has suffered during the past two days from violent tornadoes and an extraordinary rainfall. These disturbances are due to the remarkable differences of temperature that have prevailed in the districts affected, and to enormous evaporation which has been in progress over extensive heated surfaces. Such a succession of tornadoes within so short a period has not been experienced for many years. They have been exceptionally violent and destructive, chiefly to growing corn and timber. Our reports from many points in the West give the local effects, and it is to be feared that agricultural interests will suffer seriously in consequence.

The President in Boston.

This thing is really going too far. The Tammany Society, a defunct political organization of this city, materialized long enough the other day to entreat the country to be on its guard against "the craft and unscrupulous methods" of President Hayes, and the republican "soreheads" have been denouncing him for three months for his Southern policy. There is a general howl about the new civil service orders too. And yet not only Boston, but apparently a considerable part of New England, turned out yesterday to welcome the President. It is too bad. A great crowd, delighted to see the President; a procession marching through streets decorated with flowers; the whole population in the streets with enthusiastic shouts; a big hall full of people anxious to shake hands with the President and his Cabinet; a cordial welcome also everywhere to "that rebel fellow Key."

Is it not about time for the republican "soreheads" to come in out of the cold? What is the use of standing out there?

Columbia's Race with Harvard.

Instead of being behind at the start Columbia yesterday dashed away with the lead, held it all the first half mile, relinquished it most reluctantly in the next, steered well, and hung doggedly to her adversary over all the rest of the course. True to her traditions, she rushed her stroke at once up to thirty-nine and did not drop more than two a minute throughout the entire work. This was probably the best thing she could have done. First, because she never was so good at a long, slow stroke as at this sharp, rattling one. Second, because if a show of leading was to be made at all the place for it was in the first half mile. Indeed, had she ever before pulled an eight-oared race it is doubtful if she would have relied on her swift stroke yesterday. For a four or six, rid of every ounce of superfluous weight, it is excellent, and admirably adapted to lithe, springy and rather lightly built men, such as many of her best oars have been—such as Captain Goodwin is to-day. But for lugging a large and ponderous craft over a long distance, and with nine men aboard—one of whom is always a passenger throughout the hot, trying work—the careful, measured stroke, far forward and back, and slow in the recover, is the one to win. Yesterday's work hardly showed this, because the only crew in fit condition to race had a mere walk over and nothing to draw it out. But when, on Friday, that crew meets one which will drive or lead it over every inch of the first three miles, if not of the whole four, then the full force of this will be all the plainer.

The HERALD on Monday said that Harvard could win by a quarter of a mile; but that if she knew what she was about she would make it only half a length, or maybe by a foot of clear water. The result makes the justice of that estimate apparent to all. A crew as plucky as one could wish to see, but untrained, utterly unused to their boat, to the distance and to each other, had to meet larger, older and much heavier and more powerful men, who had seen months of work together, under a captain familiar with eight-oared racing, and of exactly the sort of work which would tell in yesterday's struggle. The result could not be different from what it was. Now all may see that Columbia had no real belief that she could win, thoroughly creditable as was her effort, considering all the circumstances. But if she could prevail on her rival to row her at all, then, if beaten, she could be sure that that rival would not decline her challenge for next year. If, again, any possible thing had brought her the victory, she could not remain unchallenged in 1878 by Harvard. Either event would put her in the company she sought, and so, not by better rowing, but by better generalship, she has gained the point that Cornell might have gained, that Cornell should have gained, but that Cornell has not gained.

Red Tape and the Indians.

One of the principal reasons why red tape in Washington is more dangerous to settlers near the Indian frontiers is this, that citizens who emigrate to those regions know the nature of the Indians, and would, if left alone, do as the pioneers of American civilization did, and take ordinary risks of property and life only. But now the condition of the West is wholly different from what it was in the time of Boone and his fellows, who penetrated the wildernesses of Kentucky and Ohio. Now the government guarantees every citizen protection, just as much in Idaho as in New York. It sells the emigrant lands, encourages settlements and undertakes to govern our Indian population and keep in subjection the wandering savages. For this purpose it builds and garrisons forts, keeps a standing army in the West and expends every year millions in providing for the Indians. It is natural that the emigrant should trust the honor of so great and powerful a government, and should fearlessly depend upon its promises to protect himself and his family from the savage.

But how is the promise kept? Let the recent massacres in Idaho make answer. Again the settlers have been betrayed by the government, which failed to give the protection it promised. Worse than this, after the country has been shocked by the murders in Idaho, it has refused to send troops enough to defend the women and children who were spared, but who are now in danger of fates worse than death. There is no authority under the law, it is coolly said, by which the government can send a part of its army to their assistance. If another dreadful calamity should happen it will not be to the Indian savages that the country will turn with wrath, but to the officials in Washington, who have so tied up our troops in red tape that the army is almost useless for the very purposes for which it is created and maintained.

A Gloomy View.

Some of the Philadelphia office-holders declare plumply that the President's civil service order will kill the republican party. It seems to us they take a needlessly gloomy view of the situation. The party is dead already. The poor thing is out of its misery; its sufferings are over. But if any one in Philadelphia is going to write an obituary notice of it he should call attention to the fact that the republican party was never so vigorous as in the days when it had no office-holders. Perhaps it will revive when it gets rid of them again.

The Grand Army of the Republic.

The vitality of the Grand Army of the Republic is shown by the fact that, though twelve years have passed since the war ended, and nearly that time since the society was created, it now has an organization extending through nearly all the Northern States, and including many thousands of Union soldiers. No decrease of enthusiasm was shown in the meeting of the National Encampment at Providence yesterday. The parades, dinners and festivities generally were in strong contrast with the sufferings and hardships these veterans had undergone in the tented field, and they are to be heartily congratulated on the success of the reunion. The speeches of Commander-in-Chief Hartranft and of General Burnside were appropriate and eloquent, and a peculiar illustration of the changed relations of this country with England was furnished by the telegram sent by Governor Hartranft to ex-President Grant, "care of Queen Victoria." We trust Her Majesty saw that it was delivered promptly, for such courtesy would strengthen the friendship existing between the two nations. It is well that the heroic deeds of the war should be recalled, and that the men who shouldered the musket in the dark days of the Republic should meet to celebrate its prosperity, and in all these respects the proceedings of the National Encampment have the approval of the public. The fear that it would become merely a party organization has been dissipated by experience, for its influence upon politics has been slight, especially of late years, and many Union veterans are not members of the Order. Danger from such a society is chimerical, for the American soldier could never betray the principle for which he fought. Yet the most harmless of organizations may be diverted from its proper ends, and this was the case when the resolution was adopted yesterday, declaring that Decoration Day was intended to perpetuate the memories of Union soldiers only. It is too late, twelve years after the war to indulge in this spirit, and we are glad to believe that the mistake of a moment will not be indorsed by the majority of the members of the Grand Army, certainly not by the majority of the Union soldiers, nor by the American people.

New Jersey Politics.

Some republicans in New Jersey propose, it seems, to nominate ex-Secretary Robeson for Governor. These geniuses ought to have a leather medal given them, with a suitable device engraved on it. One wonders where they have lived for the last year and a half, or even for the last three months. There is a general belief that New Jersey will go democratic this fall; these republicans evidently want to make it sure. We do not hear that the Iowa republicans mean to nominate ex-Secretary Belknap; but why not?

The HERALD remarked the other day that the republican party is dead. Certainly no live party would "trot out" Mr. Robeson for Governor, even if it were sure he would be beaten.

Rénan says:—"As generally happens, Hebrew literature, in assuming the character of a sacred book, had become the subject of a conventional exegesis, much less intent upon explaining the old texts according to the meaning in their authors' minds than on finding in them aliment for the moral and religious wants of the day."

In London evening parties, especially dances, are later than ever, and dancing rarely begins till eleven. Invitation cards are sometimes a curiosity. The Duchess of Westminster sent out one the other day, in which the invites were asked not to tell, and were informed that there might be a dance on such an evening, and that "an R.S.V.P. will oblige."

Carlyle, sitting down with Emerson on the hills near his old Scottish home, thirty years ago, said, "The building of the Dunscore kirk yonder brought you and me together;" and Emerson replied, "It was, perhaps, ordained by Providence to hinder us from tyrannizing over one another, that no individual should be of such importance as to cause by his retirement or death any chasm in the world." After this they got up and walked.

Sir John Arnott, proprietor of the Irish Times, has determined to erect, in a healthy portion of Dublin, for the use of the printers connected with his journal, cottages which he will provide for them at a merely nominal rent. As soon as practicable, from forty to fifty suitable houses will be completed, so that the steady and industrious among the employés will shortly become occupiers of well-built, well-drained and moderately rented cottages, instead of residing in crowded and unhealthy tenement houses, where neither comfort nor cleanliness exists.

General Grant Visits Queen Victoria.

CONSULTING BISMARCK.

[BY CABLE TO THE HERALD.]

LONDON, June 27, 1877.

The crowning social event of General Grant's visit to England was his reception by Queen Victoria, yesterday, at Windsor. The etiquette of the court forbids any information of what passed at the royal dinner table to be made public, and so the world must wait for the details of what must have been an interesting interview until the event itself will have faded from the public mind and lost its significance. This courtly etiquette is a relic of the barbarous ages when kings and queens were religiously believed to be made of a different class of clay from the other inhabitants of the globe and like other monuments of superstitious belief it has survived the faith which called it into existence.

GRANT AT WINDSOR.

General Grant and wife left London yesterday by the five P. M. train from Paddington and arrived at Windsor at thirty-five minutes past five The Mayor, several members of the Corporation and a number of spectators were assembled on the platform to witness the arrival. The General and Mrs. Grant, who were accompanied by Minister Pierrepont, were conveyed in one of Her Majesty's carriages to the Castle, where they were received by the Queen at the bottom of the staircase at the Queen's entrance, and conducted through the State corridor to the White Drawing Room.

INTERVIEW WITH QUEEN VICTORIA.

After a short interview General Grant and wife were conducted to apartments over the Waterloo Gallery overlooking the Home Park. In the evening a grand dinner party was given in General Grant's honor, during which the band of the Grenadier Guards played in the quadrangle.

CONSOLIDATING THE CABLE COMPANIES.

An extraordinary meeting of the Direct United States Cable Company was held yesterday, Mr. Pender presiding. In submitting a special report to the meeting the Chairman said it had been found impossible, with the restrictions which existed in the memorandum of association, to conclude definitely any terms with the Anglo-American Company, and it was therefore necessary to propose to the shareholders a reconstruction of the company. This, if carried out, would enable the new company to adopt the terms arranged with the Anglo-American Company.

COMMITS HARI-KARI.

It was proposed to carry out reconstruction by voluntarily winding up the company with a view to a reorganization and union with the Anglo-American Company. The Board of Directors were of opinion that the plan proposed would be more profitable than a policy of isolation, and would be advantageous to both companies. Mr. Pender concluded by moving the adoption of the report, which was carried after a long discussion.

AN OVERWHELMING DEFEAT.

At the meeting of the Direct United States Cable Company yesterday the party which is opposed to Mr. Pender's policy demanded a poll, but were defeated by 3,725 votes against 419.

The Anglo-American Cable Company also met yesterday and approved the joint purse agreement.

[BY CABLE TO THE HERALD.]

LONDON, June 27, 1877.

The bombardment of Rustchuk is watched with interest, not only by the Russians at Giurgevo, but also by every Cabinet Minister in Europe. The Czar is at Giurgevo and evidently intends to see with his own eyes the efficiency of the Russian gunners. From Rustchuk direct it is next to impossible to despatch any intelligence owing to the excitement existing there, but the following details of the bombardment of that town by the Russian batteries at and near Giurgevo are forwarded by the HERALD's special correspondent, who dates his message from Schumla, Monday night:—

THE BOMBARDMENT.

"The bombardment of Rustchuk has caused intense excitement among the Turkish troops at Shumla, and they display a remarkable eagerness to meet the Russians at the bayonet's point.

OMINOUS PREPARATIONS.

"During Friday and Saturday the lookouts posted on the roofs of the mosques and on the ridges behind the town, over which passes the main road to Shumla, discovered and reported an unusual activity on the part of the Russians at Giurgevo and its vicinity. Trains of small wagons were observed to pass frequently between the batteries on the river bank and the town, and there were groupings of men in the works that suggested preparations of an extraordinary character. Fears were entertained in Rustchuk that the ominous signs meant a sudden crossing of the river under cover of a heavy fire from the Russian batteries.

THE TURKS ON THE ALERT.

"In view of this the Turkish commander ordered large bodies of troops that had been previously encamped behind the southern defences of the town to move out toward Maratin and along the Sistova road, in order to cover the railroad line and to guard against a flank attack on the westward. Supplies of artillery ammunition from the not over large magazines behind Rustchuk were sent to the batteries along the river front and to the field works recently erected covering the railroad. As far as possible every precaution was taken to guard against a surprise.

ANXIOUS HOURS.

"During Saturday evening and night a profound silence reigned over the scene. The great muddy Danube rolled sullenly on between the belligerents, and scarcely reflected a light on either shore. Groups of citizens and soldiers gathered in the streets and, in scarcely audible tones, discussed the probable battle of the morrow. Many of the more timid inhabitants fled during the day to the high ground behind the city, but as night approached they began to straggle back to their deserted homes, hoping that the hour of danger would pass in the darkness of the night.

OPENING FIRE.

"The sun had scarcely risen on Sunday morning ere the anxious watchers at Rustchuk discerned through the river mists horsemen riding furiously back and forth from Giurgevo. As these horsemen were evidently carrying messages between the batteries and the town the suspense among the people in Rustchuk became painful, for the belief was general that the day would witness some important event of the war. Suddenly from one of the Russian batteries a flash was seen in the centre of a globe of grayish white smoke, and a shell sped screaming over Rustchuk to explode on the slope of the hill crowned by Fort Hanamdji. It was the signal for the bombardment. Immediately after it seemed as if every Russian gun was fired simultaneously, for the earth fairly trembled with the roar of the artillery and the shells flew over the doomed city with an awful and indescribable sound.

THE TURKS REPLY.

"Although the Roumanian shore, above, below and in front of Giurgevo was entirely obscured by the smoke from the Russian guns the Turkish batteries promptly opened an answering fire, and soon nothing could be seen on the river banks but dense rolling volumes of smoke, through which, almost every two seconds, flashes would dart like lightning through storm clouds. Boom, boom, went the Turkish guns, with an uninterrupted regularity, although the Russian shells were falling in and around the works with a fatal precision.

AT SHORT RANGE.

"This extraordinary artillery duel was maintained at a range of not more than three thousand yards. The guns on both sides being heavy pieces the fire was direct and the trajectory of the missiles very flat. Consequently every object hit in Rustchuk was rent and torn by penetration or demolished by the explosion that followed. The effects of the Turkish fire could only be observed at intervals, when the smoke would clear a little; but it is evident that considerable damage was inflicted on the Russian batteries.

A CITY BOMBARDED.

"The terribly effective character of the Russian fire can scarcely be described. The gunners seem to have directed every shot at Rustchuk, without regard to the buildings liable to be injured. Shell after shell came crashing through the roofs of the houses and burying themselves in the floors, where they exploded, demolishing the walls. The mosques seemed to be selected as particular targets at times, for two, three and often more shells would fall on and around them, tearing pinnacle and dome with fearful effect.

EVEN THE HOSPITALS.

"Not even the hospitals were spared by this awful rain of shells. Several of these buildings happened to be quite exposed, and, although surmounted by flags indicating their character, they were involved in the storm and their inmates in many cases were killed in their beds. This has caused the utmost indignation among the Turks, and the authorities have requested the foreign consuls to testify to the occurrence, so that the Porte may make a formal protest against what it deems to be uncivilized warfare.

THE CONSULATES UNSPARED.

"Although the flags of England and other European Powers were displayed over their respective consulates, the Russian fire did not spare these buildings. The guns were aimed at Rustchuk and everything animate and inanimate within its limits. Shells have no neutrality and do not discriminate between consulates, mosques and hospitals.

KILLED IN THE STREETS.

"The unfortunate inhabitants of Rustchuk suffered terribly during the bombardment. Hid away in deep recesses or sheltered behind thick walls, the Russian shells found and destroyed them. As they darted through the streets toward places of greater security their bodies were scattered in fragments by the explosion of these terrible missiles. Women flying from their burning or ruined homes were killed as they ran. Little children, clasped in the arms of their terrified parents, were struck dead by the fatal fragments. The scene was one of unqualified horror throughout.

DURING MONDAY.

"The Russian fire continued during Monday, and with still more terrible effect. Such of the people as could muster up courage to fly from their nooks of shelter have hurried away to the interior. The ruin of the town is almost complete, but the fortifications are practically intact and not much damaged."

A FUTILE DEVICE.

It is asserted at Constantinople that the English Consul at Rustchuk, who also acts for the United States, unavailingly endeavored to avert the Russian fire by hoisting the American flag.

The consulates of France, Italy, Greece, Germany and Belgium have also been injured by the Russian fire.

FURTHER DETAILS OF THE ACTION.

The Daily News has the following from Rustchuk Monday:—"The entire population are flying into the neighboring villages. The Governor General of the Province has declared that he holds the authorities reponsible for the lives of the fugitives, who are mostly Christians. Twelve shells have fallen upon the military hospitals, five upon the civil hospital and two upon the Orphan Asylum. The patients were seized with a panic and have left their beds.

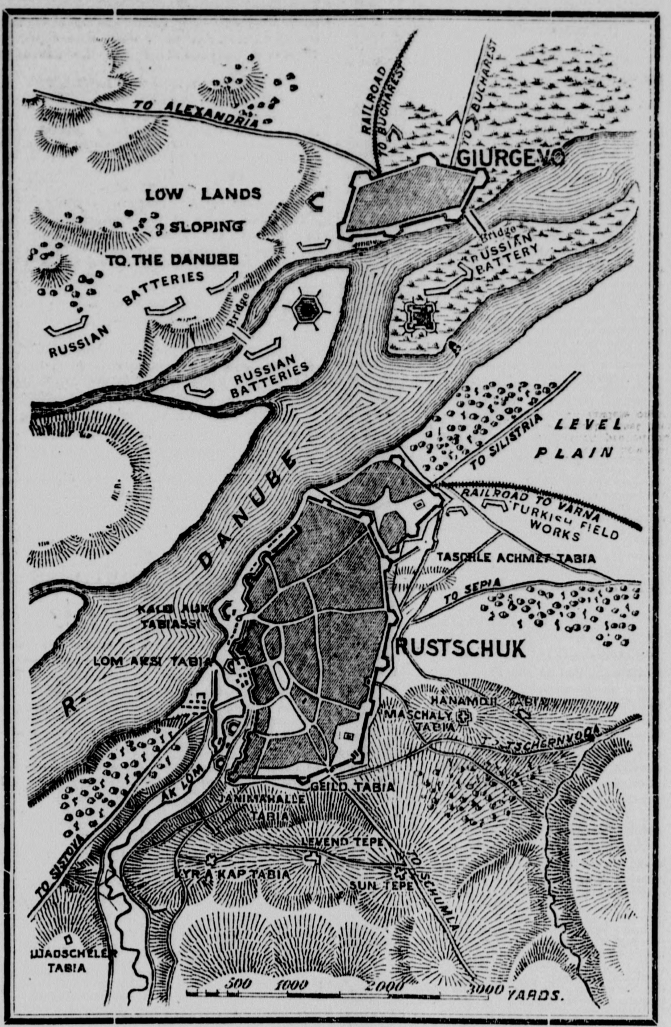
HOW GIURGEVO SUFFERED.

"The Turks in return partly destroyed Giurgevo. Seven hundred shells fell there yesterday and 800 to-day. One Russian battery has been dismounted. The Russians apparently meditate a serious attempt to capture the island of Pyrgos.

ALL RESERVES COMING FORWARD.

On the shore behind Pyrgos three Russian batteries are encamped, with two field battalions and large masses of cavalry. Ever since Wednesday last dense columns of troops belonging to the new Russian army corps from Kischeneff have been passing through Jassy. Next week the St. Petersburg Guards are expected by the same route. Two complete army corps, the Fourteenth and Eleventh, are already in the Dobrudscha."

RUSTCHUK BOMBARDED.



A MOVEMENT OF THE RUSSIAN RIGHT.

It is reported from Bucharest that the Cossacks crossed the Danube on Monday from Kalarasch, and, finding Rahova evacuated, occupied the town. They advanced on the place slowly, fearing a surprise. In the rear of the town they found several deserted camps, which they burned. This important report requires confirmation, as it indicates an advance by the right wing of the Russian army.

MONTENEGRO FREE ONCE MORE.

The Vienna correspondent of the HERALD telegraphs that it is reported in the Austrian capital that the Montenegrins have forced Suleiman Pacha and Ali Saib to retire into Albania, thus freeing the soil of Montenegro from every Turk.

IN THE DOBRUDSCHA.

The total number of the Russians already in the northern part of the Dobrudscha, according to the HERALD's Vienna correspondent, is 30,000, and these are steadily advancing to effect a junction with the forces which will cross further up the river. Hirsova has been evacuated by the Turks, and the Russians occupied it on Monday.

BEFORE ERZEROUM.

From Asia Minor the news is rather meagre. The HERALD's representative at Erzeroum telegraphs that the Russian advance guard has reached Khorassan. The Turks are very reticent about the details of the fighting at Delibaba. At Erzeroum, a great victory is talked about, as a matter of course, but every attempt to gather facts meets with non-success. It has been ascertained by the HERALD's correspondent that the fighting on Thursday last continued for thirteen hours, at the end of which time each army retained its position. That the fighting continued on the 22d and 23d there is every reason to believe.

NO HOPE FOR KARS.

Kars is still closely invested. There is a sufficiently large army before that city to prevent any reinforcements from entering it. The Russians have never for a single day abandoned the aggressive, and however great the reported Turkish victories as doled out through official sources the ultimate result is that the Turkish army of defence is found to have been driven further and further back, and that the Russians, with resolute persistency, are closing in on this doomed city of Erzeroum.

ITALY NOT ASLEEP.

Italy is making active preparations for a crisis in European affairs. Large purchases of horses for cavalry and artillery use are being made, according to the HERALD's Vienna correspondent, by the Italian government. Other preparations on an extensive scale are being carried on. All the ambassadors have returned to Rome.

RUSSIA AND THE OTHER POWERS.

A St. Petersburg despatch to the Russian Telegraphic Agency, contradicting recent pessimist reports as to the relations of Russia with the other Powers, says:—"It must be admitted that Russia before resolving upon war received necessary assurances from the Cabinets interested, and as Russia will loyally keep her promises there can be no doubt that the Powers will fulfil theirs. The peace of Europe, therefore, appears perfectly assured, and the results of the war, far from imperilling, can only consolidate it."

MORE TROUBLE AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

In Constantinople the agitation against Redif Pacha, Minister of War, and all the military authorities, is on the increase. The success in Montenegro, so far from calming this excitement, has rather increased it, it being deemed downright folly—almost treason—that in order to gain successes at a comparatively trifling point the important theatre of war in Asia should have been so wofully neglected. The nomination of Dervish Pacha to a command in Asia has contributed to this, for after the signal incapacity shown by the latter in Bosnia and Albania, his appointment is looked upon only as a job.

BLOWING UP THE SUEZ CANAL.

A special despatch from Alexandria, Egypt, published in the second edition of the News, says:—"The report recently published of the conspiracy to blow up the Suez Canal was based on authentic information, but the Khedive is taking effective measures to prevent such an attempt being made on land, while a sea police is being organized under the command of two English officers.

IT WILL NOT BE ASKED.

The Standard publishes a paragraph in official form stating that despite assertions to the contrary the government see no necessity as yet for asking the House to grant a supplementary vote. The assertion that it had been decided to adjourn and not prorogue Parliament in August is equally speculative.

Prince Gortschakoff has arrived in Bucharest, accompanied by the staff of the Russian Chancellery.

DEVELOPMENTS OF THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

The Coroner's inquest on the bodies of the Weldon family, murdered by William C. Terrill, near the hamlet of Gore, last Friday evening, to-day disclosed the fact that the body of the young girl, Nancy Hite, had been foully outraged before her murder. There are still fears of lynching rife, and the prisoners will be brought back to this city this evening for safe keeping.

ARRESTS FOR MURDER.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 26, 1877.

James Gardner and J. W. Grove were arrested on Friday last at Sandy Hook, Md., on suspicion of being the murderers of Rev. J. M. Friday, late pastor of the Lutheran Church at Harper's Ferry, W. Va., whose dead body was found in the canal near that place on June 1. At the time the Coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental drowning, but further developments and examination of the body led to the impression that Mr. Friday was knocked down and his body thrown into the canal. Gardner and Grove are in jail at Hagerstown, and an investigation will take place to-morrow before a justice. It is stated that Gardner has confessed to having witnessed the murder.

HORSE THIEVES IN JAIL.

ARREST OF MEMBERS OF A DESPERATE GANG.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

LAWRENCE, Kan., June 26, 1877.

A few days ago the HERALD correspondent telegraphed the fact that a well organized and powerful band of horse thieves and counterfeiters were carrying on operations throughout various localities in the Western States. It was supposed, some time ago, from what information could be obtained by detectives, that Billy Scott, a member of the gang, was somewhere in the neighborhood of Lawrence, from which point it was thought he directed all the movements of the gang. The detectives have been secretly at work in this locality for a week past, but failed to make any arrests until Saturday night, the 23d inst., when a man answering Scott's description and four others were arrested while sitting in a farm house three miles west of Lawrence, and owned by a man named Pete Harrison, who, it is thought, is a member of the organization, but used the cloak of a farmer's avocation to better his plans of operation as a counterfeiter and horse thief. Scott and the others denied being the persons answering to the names given by the detectives, or ever having been connected with any gang of horse thieves in the West. Several letters, however, were found in Scott's possession which proved that he was the leader, and had for months past been directing the entire movements of the lawless organization.

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 2[illegible].

William Brown has been arrested here for forging the name of Mr. William E. Seeley, cashier of the First National Bank of Bridgeport, Conn., to a check for $1,450 on the Importers and Traders' Bank of New York. The check was placed in a Rahway Bank on deposit, and on inquiry at Bridgeport was pronounced genuine. Subsequent presentation of the original check there proved it to be a forgery. Brown has been committed.

He said he had not seen Mr. Evarts or any one else for the purpose alleged, and knew nothing whatever of any intention on the part of the government to acquire by seizure or purchase any portion of Mexican territory.

To him Dr. Godard confessed the theft, stating that he was driven to the act by want. He gave the address of the pawnbroker with whom he pledged the shawl, and yesterday he was committed by Justice Bixby in the Harlem Police Court.

PROTECTING A FLEET AT NIGHT.

[From the London Times' Naval Intelligence.]

We have already alluded to the importance of light as a means of preventing the approach of torpedo craft toward a ship in the night, and described an adaptation of what is known as the Holmes distress signal, in the form of a shot, for illuminating purposes. The subject seems already to have attracted the attention of numerous inventors. One of the most simple and ingenious contrivances for the purpose of investing a fleet with a zone of light through which no enemy could pass without being observed has been devised by M. Ferdinand Silas, of Vienna, whose experiments with lifebuoys at Portsmouth have been reported in these columns. M. Silas' inextinguishable lighting shell is similar to a common shell, can be made to fit any gun, and can, accordingly, be projected to any distance. The projectile consists of three parts, one within the other. Within the shell proper is a lining of wet sponge, and within this is a glass bottle which fills the whole cavity, the bottom of the shell unscrewing to admit of its entrance. This bottle is filled with various charges of phosphide, none of which, however, is to be less than ten pounds. A small channel is bored through the sharp point of the shell in order to allow the air to mix freely with the wet sponge and there are a couple of apertures in the head which are plugged with wooden stoppers covered with leather. Through the movable bottom of the sheel a steel striker is inserted which is fitted with a spring and communicates with the glass bottle within. When the light shell is fired this is what happens:—The spring striker is driven forward by the explosion like a gas check and so breaks the bottle; the water contained in the jacket of sponges then penetrates through the broken glass and saturates the phosphide; phosphuretted hydrogen is immediately generated in large quantities by the pressure of which the stoppers are forced out and two streams of illuminating matter are poured upon the sea. The light burns with great brilliancy for a considerable time and is perfectly inextinguishable.

FIGHT BETWEEN SPINSTERS.

[From the Watertown (Ala.) Democrat].

It was a hand-to-hand engagement between Annie Owens and Sarah Jones, who could not, even under the subduing influence of a soul-inspiring sermon, control their passions. The fight occurred on the 20th ult., during divine services in a church in Ixonia. The girls entered the church and unaccountably both occupied the same seat. While the rest of the congregation were attentive listeners to the sermon, Sarah Jones arose from her seat and raised a window near by to get a little fresh air. This did not suit Miss Annie, who was seated by her side, and she instantly got up leaned over her enemy and spitefully pulled the window down. This slight indignity led to a few epithets, and the window was again raised and as quickly pulled down. Then Sarah struck Annie with a book over the left eye, and the engagement threatened to be fierce and determined for a time, but a few women stopped it. After the services care was taken not to permit the belligerents to get at it outside. They had the satisfaction, though, of shaking their fists at each other.

A GALA DAY AT VASSAR.

COLLEGE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

PRIZE SPEAKING AT BOOTH'S THEATRE BY THE SUCCESSFUL CONTESTANTS FOR COLLEGIATE HONORS.

The annual prize speaking of the students of the College of the City of New York took place last night at Booth's Theatre. After the overture prayer was offered by Dr. Kortell. The reading of the Riggs prize essays followed. The successful contestants for these prizes were Lewis S. Burchard, of the senior class, and Eugene Fishel, of the junior class. Mr. Burchard read his essay on "The Choice of a Profession After Graduation." It was full of strong ideas expressed in graceful English. He argued that every young man on starting out in life should devote himself to some one profession, and that the one for which he felt himself the most fitted. The best professions were those which aimed to leave mankind better than they found it, such as theology, teaching, law and journalism. Six young men chosen from the senior, junior and sophomore classes next contested for the prize for prose declamations offered by Commissioner Wood. As judges of the contest Mr. Wood selected Messrs. Richard O'Gorman, General Foster and General Thomas D. Johns. J. S. McWilliam, of the sophomore class, was the first speaker. He chose the battle piece, "How Saratoga Was Won," by Charles Sheppard. His voice, gestures and manner were excellent. Ernest Perrin, of the sophomore class, followed with the speech of Robert Emmet on being condemned for high treason. His articulation was accurate and his gestures graceful, but his voice was hardly so loud as that of his predecessor. Thomas V. Dobbie, of the junior class, recited a piece by Thomas Corwin upon "Unjust National Acquisitions." His manner was more calm than the others, but the style of the speech did not admit of much display of passion. Anthony T. Horn, of the junior class, spoke Wendell Phillips' oration, "Toussaint l'Ouverture." His voice was excellent, but his manner was slightly labored, and he emphasized too many words in each sentence. He was interrupted several times by the applause of the audience. David M. Hunter, of the senior class, delivered an extract from Daniel Webster's speech on the President's protest. He proved himself to be an incipient orator of the first order. Bernard Loth, of the senior class, delivered Wendell Phillips' oration on "The Last Great Protest." His manner and gestures were very good, but in the parts requiring greater emphasis his voice was hardly voluminous enough. This closed the contest for the prose declamations. The result will be announced by the judges and the medal awarded at the exhibition next Thursday night.

A similar contest was next entered into for the prize for poetry declamations, offered by G. R. Lockwood. There was only one contestant from each of the three classes. Theodore C. Ives, of the sophomore class, recited Longfellow's "King Robert of Sicily," a very difficult piece, but one to which the young man did full justice. He was followed by Alexander Bernstein, who recited "The Black Regiment," by George H. Boker. His voice was too weak and pitched on too high a key, so that it was not an easy matter to follow the speaker. Charles C. Protheroe, of the senior class, spoke Bret Harte's poem, "John Burns, of Gettysburg." His tone was rather conversational than oratorical and failed to do full justice to the piece. The result of this contest will be announced at the commencement. The exercises were over by ten o'clock. Among the prominent persons present were Commissioner Wood, ex-Commissioner Brennan, Rev. Dr. Kortell, G. R. Lockwood, M. Christern, Rev. Dr. Burchard and President Webb.

SACRED HEART ACADEMY.

Yesterday was a gala day for pupils and teachers at the Sacred Heart Academy, at Manhattanville. About two hundred and fifty little girls, misses and young ladies arrayed in pure white, with not a thread of color to mar the effect, formed the three sides of a hollow square in the study hall, where a varied programme gave delight to about forty of the most distinguished clergy of this diocese, the Cardinal being among the number. The decorations of the hall consisted chiefly of green box formed into medallions and festoons around the walls, while pillars, disposed at intervals, relieved the vivid green with their burden of rare flowers. Small stands were arranged to form a mosaic pattern on the floor, box festooned, the pedestals and pots of the choicest flowers added brilliancy and fragrance to the scene. Three rows of seats formed as many tiers on all sides of the hall, while at one end a bower of box and flowers almost concealed the statue of a patron saint. When the pupils were all seated three of their number began the overture "Poet and Peasant," while the Cardinal and attendant clergy walked in and took their seats at one end of the hall. The Cardinal wore his home dress, a black cassock with cardinal cordings and the Fariola or cardinal cloak over his shoulders. When all the clergy were seated a young lady made a short address of welcome, and then followed solos and duets, vocal and instrumental. Among those most warmly applauded was a piano performance of Rosini's "Quis est Homo."

Five little girls represented respectively Joy, Regret, Gratitude, Hope and Pardon; and as each one expressed the sentiment of her part an echo of it was heard without the hall. This effect was produced by having a piano stationed outside, which was softly played while a sweet voice sang the refrain "Joy, joy," or "Regret, regret;" but Hope at last cheered all hearts by the thought of "Meet Again."

A little girl of about seven years gave a most humorous description, "Why Doggie's Nose is Always Cold," and began away back in the history of the world by stating that once upon a time a big rain fell, and a man built a house, in which he and a lot of animals, with his family, took refuge. The faithful doggie had helped his master drive all the animals into the ark, but when he tried to enter he could only get half way in, so that from having his head out in the rain for 900 days his nose got so cold it has never been able to get warm since. The whole story was so cunningly recited that it "brought down the house" when the little narrator made her bow and told her audience that the man was "N-o-a-h." The graduates—Miss M. Tone, L. Jones, J. Mahon, L. Summers, M. Summers, M. J. Mullany, K. Murphy, A. Smith and F. Smith then knelt before the Cardinal while he placed the laurel crowns upon their heads and gave each one a gold medal with a white ribbon. One of their number then, in well-chosen language, delivered the farewell address, to which the Cardinal replied in his usual benign and happy manner. He said he did not know how to reply to such beautiful sentiments unless he could find the spring at which the pupils had imbibed such pure ideas or noble desires. Whether the spring were situated in the convent walls or in their own young hearts he did not know, but would advise them, when they thirsted, to return to the fountain from whence such high aspirations emanated. After congratulating both pupils and teachers, he blessed and dismissed them to an evening of enjoyment.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NO. 18.

The blushing misses of Grammar School No. 18 held their graduating exercises yesterday afternoon at the school building on Fifty-first street, near Lexington avenue. With the thermometer at 100 degrees the schoolroom was packed to the limit of uncomfortableness. Eager young men and maidens crowded against one another and stood on tiptoe to see the favorites step gracefully up the aisle for their diplomas. Most of the young ladies were attired in cool white dresses, and wore their hair in poetic ringlets over their shoulders. The programme—which was vigorously applauded by as many as could lift their arms from their sides for that purpose—was as follows:—

Hymn, "None Like God"......Rossini
Chorus, "If on the Meads"......Gumbert
Recitation, "Ballad of the War"......Amelia Hunt
Solo, "Whip Poor Will's Song"......Millard
Louise Taylor.
Gedicht, "Erlkonig"......Neva Reed
Duet and chorus, "Beware"......Moulton

Address to graduates, Mr. Henry Kiddle, City Superintendent.

The graduates were Misses Addie Beckwith, Gussie Bach, Emma Carroll, Grace Bontoit, Bella Davidson, Fanny Elkan, Maggie Goshon, Minnie Hannelly, Henrietta Herman, Katie Hagan, Hortense T. Igelstorm, Annie R. Keefe, Ella Konigsberg, Bertha Meyer, Selma Rossman, Neva Reed, Adele Rosenthal, Bella Schwartz and Juliette Westheimer. The valedictory was delivered by Miss Addie Beckwith.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NO. 69.

The first annual commencement of the female department of Grammar School No. 69, Fifty-fourth street, near Sixth avenue, took place yesterday afternoon under the direction of Miss Annie M. Hoffman, principal. Colonel Joel W. Mason, chairman of the Board of School Trustees of the Twenty-second ward, presided. The exhibition was not very well attended, but the exercises, which consisted of choruses, recitations, dialogues, solos and duets on the piano, passed off very creditably.

Maggie Burton read an address of welcome. Charlotte Blumenthal gave a recitation on "The Wind and Moon," and, although a bad cold rendered her voice rather hoarse, she exhibited good elocutionary powers. Miss Jennie Sterhberger, in a composition on "Saturday Night," gave a very true description of the bustling scenes of the busiest night of the week. The dialogue "Blue Glass," written by Miss Waterbury, vice principal of the school, was rendered by fifteen little girls, who played their parts excellently. The piece was divided into two scenes, the first representing children's talk in a schoolroom, the second a conventional visit, in which persons of ton exchanged courtesies and kindnesses when together, and slandered each other afterward. Millard's song "Waiting" was finely sung by Addie De Lavelette, who, to judge from her age, will have to be "waiting" for some years yet. One of the best recitations of the day was delivered by little Nettie Seddon, who spoke a piece called "Aunt Tabitha." Maggie Hunter displayed fine elocution in the recitation, "Jephtha's Daughter." The dialogue "Country Cousins" was loudly applauded. It represented a rural mother and daughter coming to see their city cousins, the former vulgar and boisterous, the latter rendered vain and conceited by a superficial education. Misses Susie Drew, Dora Miller, F. Louisa Mason and Orcilla Erskin took part in the play. "Cousin Jedediah," a solo and semi-chorus, taken part in by ten little girls conducted by Miss Ella Masterton, produced much merriment. The "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" was sung by Misses Lizzie M. Martin, Annie Woodward, Ella Masterton and Mary Ryan. Another of Millard's beautiful melodies, "When the Tide Comes In," was sung by Miss Inez Sanchez.

THE GRADUATES.

At the conclusion of these exercises Judge Flammer presented the diplomas to the following graduates:—Ella Clock, Maggie Burton, Blanche Bendelari, Ellie O'Brien, Annie Begg, Lizzie M. Martin, Lulu Schreyer, Annie Woodward, Carrie O'Donnell, Emma Albro, Jennie Sternberger, Josie Scheffler, Maggie Corey, Annie Adie, Mary Linden, Josie Hassell, Ella Masterton, Janet Sperling.

The valedictory address was read by Miss Ella Clock. She was presented with a small temple of flowers by her fellow graduates. Walter Carter, one of the school trustees of the Twenty-second ward, delivered the address. He complimented the graduates very highly on the success of the first year's work of Grammar School No. 69. Mr. Hunter, of the Normal College, also addressed the audience. He said that out of 824 candidates from all the schools of the city No. 69 had carried off the highest honors. Miss Ella Clock had received the highest average of these 824 candidates, thus manifesting great talents for study and great moral powers of application.

DE LA SALLE INSTITUTE.

Chickering Hall was well filled last evening, on the occasion of the annual commencement of De La Salle Institute. Vicar General Quinn presided, assisted by a large number of clergy. The exercises of the evening, which were exceedingly interesting, consisted of an essay on "Character" by E. J. Stand; recitation, "How He Saved St. Michael's," by Peter J. Montague; essay, "Napoleon," by D. C. Cunnion; recitation, "The Raven," by Joseph H. McMahon; the "Rivals," by Thomas F. Bergain and George B. McGinnis; recitation, "Parrhasius," by Thomas W. Kean, and an essay, "The Church and the Fine Arts," by P. F. Mulray. The Rev. M. J. O'Farrell made the address to the graduates, who comprised the following:—Peter Montague, Emile F. Stand, Patrick F. Mulray, F. E. Hannigan and W. E. McKenna, all of whom received diplomas.

Gold medals were awarded to the senior class, those for proficiency being given to Peter J. Montague and John S. McCormick. Other medals were awarded as follows:—Classics, Emile J. Stand; English composition, Ferdinand H. Elsen; general proficiency, Rudolph M. Stehle; literature, Patrick F. Henry; mathematics, George P. Ahern; general proficiency, Joseph P. McMahon; application, George B. McGinnis; mathematics, William J. McGloin and Francis Schreink. Prizes were also awarded to Thomas W. Kean, Joseph H. McMahon, Daniel C. Cunnion and Thomas F. Bergain.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY, BROOKLYN.

The annual commencement of St. Joseph's Academy, in Dean street, near Vanderbilt avenue, Brooklyn, took place last evening. The academy is under the control of the Franciscan Brothers and is in charge of Brother Ignatius. The scholarship at present numbers 670. The exercises last evening consisted of singing, addresses, essays, dramatic performances and a military drill by a number of the pupils. Elegantly bound volumes of "The Lives of the Irish Saints" were presented to J. J. Grace, Thomas Dorsey, John Hogan, Robert Milde and Edward Quinn, of the first class—senior division—for having gained the highest honors of the school for gentlemanly deportment and advancement in the different studies, especially in English literature.

Burpee, Hatheway, Swinburne and Tighe; firsts for same in senior class to Messrs. Atwater, Beach, Camp, Gager, T. Goodell, Pyle, Thacher, Upton and Wilcox.

Chapin, of South Hadley Falls, Mass., and C. H. Strong, of Erie. Pipes were smoked and old songs sung. The audience was large and the day pleasant. Afterward the class visited all the college buildings, and planted their ivy, singing an ode written by J. P. Davenport, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

In the evening the senior promenade concert in Alumni Hall was a brilliant affair.

This afternoon Clarence King, the well known geologist and explorer, delivered a very able address in North Sheffield Hall on "Catastrophism and Evolution of Environment."

BATES COLLEGE.

LEWISTON, June 26, 1877.

The trustees of Bates College at their annual meeting this morning filled vacancies by electing Mr. C. H. Latham, of Lowell; Rev. A. L. President Cheney's report was referred to the Finance Committee.

DARTMOUTH COLLEGE.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

HANOVER, N. H., June 26, 1877.

To-day was class day, and the following had been arranged as the programme:—

EXERCISES IN THE CHURCH.

Introductory Address—Charles Eager, Manchester.
Oration—L. P. Rosenthal, New York city.
Poem—George Atkinson, Hudson, Mass.
Address to the Class—George A. Brown, Plymouth.
Address to the President—Angus A. Robertson, Halifax, United States.

EXERCISES IN FRESHMAN GALLOWS.

Chronicler—W. E. Noxon, Great Barrington, Mass.
Prophecier—Phillip Carpenter, Bath, N. H.
Class Tree Address—Benson H. Roberts.
Address at the Old Pine—Fred H. Farnsworth, Milford, Mass.; Gilbert Balch, Topsfield, Mass.

The lowering clouds and drizzling rain this morning brought disappointment to many a heart, but a brighter sky soon brought brighter hours. The class formed in front of Reed Hall at two P. M., and were escorted into the college church by the Boston Cadet band. The oration by L. P. Rosenthal, of New York city, was the feature of the day. His subject was "Young Men as Promoters of Progress." His oration showed great research and scholarly learning. His delivery was excellent. All the other speakers did themselves credit.

After the exercises were finished in the church the class marched to the Freshman Gallows, so called because in days of yore it is said that a freshman was there hanged. The chronicles and prophecies as usual provoked long and repeated roars of laughter. The most affecting part of class day exercises is the address to the old pine, around which for almost a century the graduating class have smoked their farewell pipe, and where for the last time the class circle is formed and broken in the centre of the college campus. Alumni in town and members of the faculty think this to be one of the finest class days in the history of the college.

The day was finished by an informal hop in Conant Hall.

AMHERST COLLEGE.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES—MEMORIAL SERVICES—CLASS REUNIONS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

AMHERST, Mass., June 26, 1877.

"It always rains class day," has become proverbial in Amherst, and so Old Prob. brought us a brisk shower about noon, which, however, contrary to precedent, ceased before the senior class gathered in College Hall to celebrate the day of all days of commencement week. Owing to a delayed train the Mendelssohn Quintet failed to furnish the expected music, but by the kindness of Mrs. Bent and the college glee club the large audience were well entertained. After prayer was offered by President Seeleye, the president of the day, in a happy speech, introduced the class orator, H. D. Moxson, of De Ruyter, N. Y. His theme was, "The Attitude of the Scholar in Religious Inquiry." An easy and graceful speaker, he did full credit to the class which thus honored him. He is valedictorian, and would also have contested for the Hyde prize had his health permitted.

The poem by S. L. Loomis, of Bedford, was entitled "College Pictures," and was a breezy sketch of some of the memorable events in the history of '77.

UNDER THE PINES.

College Grove was next sought, after '79 had sung the farewell ode to '77. The old pines rang with laughter while G. L. Fowler, of New York, delivered the grove oration. The miscellaneous exercises consisted of supplying the freshmen with milk, the sophomores with cigars and the juniors with lemonade. The attempt of the "fresh" to obtain the cigars raised a breeze immediately to be quelled only by their expulsion from the sacred ring by sophomoric muscle. Long calumets were furnished to the seniors, and after these were filled, some with tobacco for the smokers and some with tea for the anti-tobacconists, the graduating class sat about in a circle and sang college songs, with the Amherst cheer for sundry individuals, the several classes, and an extra loud one for Old Amherst.

CONCERT.

The class day concert this evening was a decided success. The singing by the College Glee Club was a new feature, and was found to be a very popular one with those who rarely listen to college songs. The singing by Mrs. Georgie Bent was very fine, and of the Mendelssohn Club too much cannot be said. Thus closed the class day of '77, by the verdict of all a most enjoyable one.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

The memorial address of Professor Tyler this morning was a fitting tribute to one of Amherst's best and most successful presidents, and was listened to by a large audience in the college church.

CLASS REUNIONS.

To-night the class of '57 held their vigentenial reunion at Professor Mather's. A large and jolly crowd was present. The classes of '52, '67, '72 and '74 also hold reunions this week.

At the Alumni meeting to-morrow forenoon Henry M. Spofford ('40), Senator-elect from Louisiana, is expected to preside. Professor Esty ('60), and Dr. Poor ('37), will deliver addresses in memory of the late Professor Snell.

The trustees held a meeting this morning, but only routine business was transacted. Roswell D. Hitchcock, of New Yew York, presides at the inauguration of Professor Seelye to-morrow afternoon.

BASEBALL CONTEST.

At Hartford, in the afternoon, the University nine play the rubber game with Yale. The students are enthusiastic over the prospect of winning, for if Yale is defeated Amherst stands second in the list. Thursday occurs the regular exercises of commencement day.

REOPENING OF TRINITY.

Trinity Church will be reopened on Friday next (St. Peter's Day), at eleven A. M. The services will be as follows:—

Opening voluntary on the grand organ, Second Sonata, Merkel; Processional; Psalms 48, 132; Litany; dedication service; Hymn 282; Old Hundred; anthem, "I Was Glad," C. E. Horsley; Kyrie, Sanctus and Gloria, Schubert, in F; closing voluntary, overture in C, Mendelssohn.

The services on Saturday and Sunday will be as follows:—

Saturday—Opening voluntary, sonata, Fink; Te Deum and Jubilate, Calkin; anthem, "I Will Magnify, "Goss; offertory, "O Be Joyful," Lachner; Sanctus and Gloria, Mozart's first mass; closing voluntary, fantasie in C minor, Berens.

Sunday—10:30 A. M.—Opening voluntary, sonata, Van Euken; Te Deum and Jubilate, Mendelssohn; anthem, "Sing we Merrily," Crotch; offertory, "O, Be Joyful," Lachner; Sanctus and Gloria, Schubert, in F; closing voluntary, finale in E, Schumann. Afternoon, at four.—Voluntary, overture to "Fall of Babylon," Spohr; Cantate and Deus, Guseley; anthem, "I Was Glad," Horseley; closing voluntary, Symphony from "Lobgesang," Mendelssohn.

Mr. Messiter will preside at the chancel organ and Mr. Henry Carter at the grand organ.

GARDEN CITY CATHEDRAL.

CEREMONIES ATTENDING THE LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE TO-MORROW.

Arrangements for the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the Episcopal Cathedral of Garden City, Long Island, are now fully completed. It is expected that the attendance will be exceedingly large, and preparation has been made for the accommodation of the different delegations which are to take part in the procession. An address will be made by the Right Rev. Dr. Littlejohn, Bishop of the diocese, who will be followed by the Rev. Dr. Snively, of the Missionary Committee; Dr. Hall, of the Standing Committee; Dr. Schenck, of the Deputy General Convention, and by Mr. L. Bradford Prince, on behalf of the laity. The procession will form in front of the Garden City Hotel as follows:—

Conterno's Band, twenty-five pieces.
Marshals of the day.
Choristers, in surplices.
Sunday schools, with banners, led by the Superintendents and Teachers.
Vestries of the various parishes of the Diocese.
Deaconesses.
Clergy of the Diocese, in surplices.
Deputies and Provisional Deputies to the General Convention.
Missionary Committee of the Diocese.
Standing Committee of the Diocese.
Corporators of the Cathedral.
Visiting Bishops, in their robes.
The Bishops.

When the procession reaches the main entrance of the Cathedral it will form in two lines to allow the bishops to pass between. With the bishops at the head it will then reform, and, followed by the choristers, will pass entirely around the building, chanting a processional. The stone will then be placed in position.

THE MUSICAL PROGRAMME.

The chorus will consist of 200 voices, from various Episcopal choirs, assisted by the Hempstead Glee and Madrigal Society, and accompanied by Conterno's Band. The musical programme will be under the direction of Mr. J. M. Sterry, organist of St. James, and is as follows:—

Processional hymn, No. 202, "The churches our foundation"......Elvey
Psalm No. 122......Chant
Tenth Selection......Trinity Psalter
"Te Deum," unison in D......Barnby
Hymn No. 275......Old Hundred
Recessional hymn, No. 282, "Christ is made the sure foundation."

LUNCH OR NO LUNCH.

The bucolic residents of the country for miles around the site of the new Cathedral have been circulating stories of a fabulous banquet to be spread by Mrs. Stewart for the delectation of all who shall attend the ceremony. It is stated by these people that lunch for 5,000 persons has been ordered, and no doubt there will be as many persons as that present.

FUNERAL OF A VISCOUNTESS.

The funeral services of the late Viscountess de Bermingham, née Miss Louise Marie, of this city, were conducted yesterday at the Church of St. Francis Xavier by Rev. Fathers Durthaler, Merrick and Campbell. A large number of friends afterward accompanied the remains to the family vault at Calvary Cemetery.

OUR COMPLAINT BOOK.

[NOTE.—Letters intended for this column must be accompanied by the writer's full name and address to insure attention. Complainants who are unwilling to comply with this rule simply waste time in writing. Write on only one side of the paper.—ED. HERALD.]

A QUESTION FOR THE LAWYERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

If a person is bitten by a street cur or his property burned up from the use of fireworks is not the city liable for damages to the injured owing to wilful neglect in enforcing the law?
M. J. D.

A PETTY TYRANT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Has Officer Hogan, of the Fourteenth precinct, a right to insult and chase decent people away from their doors? The weather is so warm we cannot stay in our houses and if we do not go away he will arrest us.
CONSTANT READERS.

A DANGEROUS PIER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I wish to call attention to the dangerous condition of pier 22, East River, the landing place of the Morrisania steamboats. If it is not attended to an accident will have to be chronicled by the papers one of these days.
SALVO.

TWENTY-FOURTH STREET BLOCKADED.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I wish to call the attention of the Street Department to the condition of Twenty-fourth street, from Lexington avenue to Second avenue. I have occasion to go to the cars, both Third and Second avenue lines. The sidewalks are not flagged, as the laws of the city direct. A few flags are intermixed with cobble and Belgian pavement, making it very disagreeable walking. But that is not all. Yesterday I counted fifty-seven old wagons and carts standing on the street and sidewalk, from Lexington avenue to Third avenue.
J. M. S.

THE THIRTEENTH STREET STABLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I wish to call your attention to the sale and veterinary stables situated in Thirteenth street, between Third and Fourth avenues. The proprietors race their horses all hours of the day to the utter recklessness of what injury they may do. This afternoon as the children were returning from school a horse, whose points they were showing off, ran away from careless driving, and such a scare among us women and children I never wish to see again. These frights have happened very often, and it is about time complaint should be made with a view of putting a stop to such proceedings in the future.
A MOTHER.

HINTS TO THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

For several days past there have been lying in the street opposite No. 45 East Forty-fifth street, between Second and Third avenues, one or two dead cats. The pavement, gutters and sidewalks of this Forty-fifth street, between Second and Third avenues, are not in a good state, having sunk in patches, which causes foul water, &c., to collect in pools and make a stench, instead of flowing off into the sewers.

Again, an honest inspection of the water closets attached to houses in said block will positively show that at least some of them emit pestilential gases. The people have great patience with those who are culpable in these matters, for whenever the day is hot or moist or whenever the wind blows up through the sewers a person is sickened by this foulness.
K. J.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Last Friday week a man brought a dead dog and threw it on some paving stones near Gilmore's Garden, on Twenty-seventh street. Saturday morning a policeman was told of it, but four days have now passed and it is still there.
M. A. P.

POLICE CLUBBING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Your "Complaint Book" has done so much good thus far that I think it is the duty of all citizens to enter in it every just complaint. Yesterday, in the neighborhood of Eighth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, a partially drunken rowdy of a policeman arrested a young man for what nobody then knew and clubbed him unmercifully and gave a sickening exhibition of what a cowardly member of the best police in the world can do.
A CITIZEN.

WORK FOR THE POLICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Would it not be wise for Captain Kennedy to look after the loafers who have their own rendezvous in Christopher street, between Hudson and Bleecker streets, who insult passers by and sometimes even throw stones at them?
NINTH WARDER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

While passing along Chatham street on Saturday night, accompanied by my wife, I was insulted by a crowd of loafers who congregate on the corner of Pearl and Chatham streets. I call the attention of the police to this, as it is not the first time I have been insulted on that corner. The reason I make this complaint is, that in Sunday's issue of the HERALD I noticed a complaint of one of the residents, signed "C. W.," and on the following day one signing himself "T. C.," tries to contradict the charge by saying they are hardworking young men and calling on the police to testify to it. Well, now, that is not saying much. The police stationed on that corner seem to be of the same party. "T. C." says they will court the fullest investigation. Well, we shall see. I have already learned the names of three of the principal actors, and the next time I am insulted on that corner I will have warrants issued for their arrest.
A READER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Why does not Captain Cherry, of the Eleventh precinct, see that the loafers who congregate around the candy store, situated at No. 702 Fifth street, are driven from the neighborhood?
G. M.

AN APPEAL TO THE LADIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Will you allow me to make an appeal to the ladies of New York in behalf of a movement now on foot for the early closing of dry goods stores on Saturday afternoons during the next two months? Two of the leading Broadway stores have advertised their intentions to close at one o'clock. Others would willingly follow, but are guided by the mistaken idea that they would inconvenience their customers. Ladies of New York, those stores are kept open by you. Will you assure the proprietors that you can without inconvenience to yourselves do your shopping on other days of the week and that you will purchase anything indispensable early on Saturday? Will you by an act of the most trifling self-denial allow hundreds of your own sex and hundreds of deserving men to enjoy a half-holiday once a week during the oppressed heat of summer? I understand the ladies of Brooklyn have taken the matter in hand in that city, and a deputation has already waited on the manager of one of the large stores. Are the ladies of New York less generous than their Brooklyn sisters? Are they less sacrificing? less sensible to the demands of their fellow creatures? I think not. There are kind, generous hearted ladies in New York ever ready, by act and influence, to further any good. In this matter they are all powerful. The storekeepers will close at their request, and they will not only earn the gratitude of all employés, but will also have a higher reward in the consciousness of having done an act by which hundreds of hard working people will derive a real benefit.
EARNEST.

ANSWERS.

A MALICIOUS CHARGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In the HERALD of the 25th inst. there appeared a communication denouncing "a gang of rowdies" who meet on Thirty-sixth street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues. We desire to say that we are not rowdies, and that the letter was inspired by malice.
RESPECTABLE CITIZENS.

THE DANIEL DREW.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The officers of the steamer Daniel Drew complain of the untruth contained in the article signed "A. G." and published in Sunday's HERALD. They are prepared to prove that the writer was intoxicated—that he paid only the regular rates for fare and at the table, that no charge was made for washing, as alleged, and if he paid for baggage, which is doubted, it was voluntary, as no charge is permitted.

The colored bootblack, under a raised cane and threatened punishment, uttered some strong language, which was promptly checked by the clerk.
DAY LINE.

THE THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET BATH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The complaint of "A Sufferer," which appeared in your columns on Saturday last, in regard to the favoritism at the baths, is simply untrue in every respect, and was probably indited by some disappointed office-seeker or some one discharged last season for non-attention to duty. The bath at foot of Thirty-seventh street, East River, is open every day, by regulation, from five A. M. to nine P. M., and no charge is made for entrance whatever, at any hour. If "A Sufferer" will use his fertile capacity for misrepresentation in devising some plan to better control the physical force and impetuosity that concentrates at the head of the gangway to the bath in the shape of two or three thousand sturdy unwashed citizens, he will be more honorably employed than in maligning a public officer under a nom de plume, when access to the Superintendent of Repairs and Supplies is so ready at the City Hall. Respectfully,
JAMES F. RYAN, Superintendent.

THE CITY'S HEALTH.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH'S PREPARATIONS FOR THE SUMMER CAMPAIGN—THE GARBAGE QUESTION—THE FILLING-IN MATERIAL USED BY THE DOCK DEPARTMENT.

With the approach of the heated term the mind of the thoughtful citizen naturally turns to precautions taken by the city authorities to prevent or at least localize the diseases whose inception and spread are favored by high temperature. More especially are those dwelling in the poorer and more thickly populated parts of the city liable, and, above all, their young children. In view of the above a HERALD representative called on Professor Chandler, President of the Board of Health, to ascertain what preparations the Board was making for the long summer fight against the agents of disease and death.

WHAT THE BOARD IS DOING.

Dr. Chandler stated that everything that could be done with the means at the Board's disposal was being done; that the sanitary inspectors and their assistants were hard at work, as well as the disinfecting corps—the latter disinfecting in the districts where it was most needed, the privy sinks, cellars, yards, garbage boxes and street gutters. The disinfectant used for the privies was a solution of copperas and dead oil, and for the street gutters and yards copperas and carbolic acid. A mixture of zinc and iron chlorides, a refuse product of the detinning process, had been formerly used, but was not now procurable, as that business had become unprofitable. The Board had no money to pay for fruit and meat inspectors, and consequently no inspection was going on with the exception of that performed by a volunteer inspector, who was clerk in one of the markets.

THE HOUSE TO HOUSE VISITATION.

In response to the question as to whether the from house to house visitations by doctors which were carried on last summer and were productive of so much good were to be made this year Dr. Chandler said the Board was very anxious to continue this practice, but that this item had been cut out of the estimates. The Board had passed a resolution at its last meeting requesting the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to transfer to the Board of Health from the unexpended balance of last year $5,000 for carrying on the work this season.

LAST YEAR'S WORK.

From these resolutions it is seen that the Board is authorized to afford such medical relief to the poor as the protection of the public health may require. That the deaths from diarrhœal diseases for the last six years were some 24,000, of which number 21,000 were children under five years of age, and that on account of the visitations performed last year fewer deaths from this class of disease took place than during either of the hot summers of 1868, 1870 and 1872, and this notwithstanding the great average heat and the increase of population. The number of physicians employed last year, and which the Board wish to employ this year, amounted to fifty, who visited the families in the tenement houses, prescribing and giving medicine for the young children and parents who had no physician. The Board was aided greatly in its work by St. John's Guild and by many druggists, who volunteered to put up the prescriptions at or free of cost.

THE GARBAGE QUESTION.

When asked what he thought of the filling in by the Dock Department of the space behind the stone bulkheads at the foot of King street with the ashes and street sweepings collected by the Street Cleaning Bureau, Dr. Chandler said that a complaint had been received on that subject shortly before the writer's visit, and that he had sent to investigate the matter. If the more offensive parts of the garbage were removed from the dirt and ashes the filling in with such material in places where there were to be no dwellings erected, or which were not too near the line of dwellings, was not objectionable, provided the material was well covered with clean ashes or earth. The Board had already, in one or two places which were not near dwellings, given permission for filling in with this material.

SEPARATION OF GARBAGE AT HOUSES.

As regards compelling the citizens to keep the ashes and rubbish separate from the garbage, so that the former could be used without objection for like purposes, the Health Board had essayed to enforce this provision of the sanitary code; but, as the parties offending often replied that there was no use of their keeping them separate when they were dumped together into the same cart by the employés of the Street Cleaning Bureau, they had stopped threatening the offenders with prosecution.

THE DEATH RATE.

Dr. Day, Sanitary Superintendent, stated, in response to a query, that the city was at present very healthy, the death rate for last week having been only 410.

THE STREET CLEANING FORCE.

On inquiring of Captain Gunner as to the operations of the Street Cleaning Bureau, of which he is in charge, that official said that the Bureau had some 650 men and 530 carts employed. They commence to move the ashes and garbage at five o'clock in the afternoon and get through at three o'clock in the morning. Broadway and the avenues are swept at night, as are the wards which form the business part of the town, the upper wards being swept in the day time. Each ward has a street sweeping machine. Instead of being increased the force is reduced in summer, as the amount of refuse is much smaller than in the spring, when the accumulated dirt collected during the winter months had to be removed, necessitating the employment of a large force of men.

AT THE FOOT OF KING STREET.

Desirous of personally investigating the character of the filling-in material which the Police Department were furnishing the Department of Docks, the writer bent his steps riverwards to the foot of King street. Behind the stone bulkhead and the concrete foundation and backing which rest on spiles a riprap of gravel and blast rock slope landwards, and in the space between this and the street the filling-in material used is the ashes, dirt and garbage collected by the Street Cleaning Bureau. It was ascertained that the material used in all the docks so far constructed was the refuse collected during the cooler months, and that at King street the summer material had been used for the first time. The carts have been dumping at this point for only a few nights, and on one night as many as 480 cartloads were dumped.

THE GARBAGE NOT SEPARATED.

This had apparently been dumped in as collected, without any attempt at separating any of the garbage. The mixture, though not very offensive as to smell, was rather unsavory in appearance—a mixture of ashes, dirt, straw, tin cans, paper, old boots and an occasional dead cat or dog. When this has settled a layer of dirt or clean ashes is put on to the depth, it is stated, of several feet, and the engineers in charge seem to think that no evil effects will come of it. This is problematical, and the subject merits serious investigation before we find ourselves surrounded by what may prove a pestilence breeding deposit.

VITAL STATISTICS.

The following is a synopsis of the weekly report of Dr. John T. Nagle, Deputy Register of Records, to the Board of Health:—

During the week ending Saturday, June 23, 422 deaths were reported to have occurred in this city, which is an increase of 8 as compared with the number reported for the preceding week and 21 less than were reported during the corresponding week of 1876, 100 less than 1875, 23 more than 1874, 52 less than 1873, 218 less than 1872. The actual mortality for the week ending June 16 was 411, which is 83.2 below the average number of deaths for the corresponding week of the past five years, and represents an annual death rate of 19.85 per 1,000 of the population, which is estimated at 1,076,618.

Diarrhœal diseases caused 16 deaths during the week ending June 2; 23 deaths during the week ending June 9; 27 deaths during the week ending June 16, and 60 deaths during the week ending June 23, of which 55 were under five years, which is an increase of 34 deaths from these diseases in children under this age, compared with the number reported the preceding week.

JOY TO THE BOYS.

ALDERMANIC PERMISSION TO MAIM AND KILL CITIZENS AND BURN BUILDINGS ON THE GLORIOUS FOURTH—THE FIREWORKS APPROPRIATION.

A resolution was yesterday introduced in the Board of Aldermen by Mr. Cole which calls upon the different city departments to consent to transfer sufficient moneys from their appropriations to defray the expenses of a celebration of the Fourth of July.

Mr. Morris offered an amendment that the moneys so transferred be appropriated to the sufferers by the St. John and Marblehead fires.

Messrs. Cole and Purroy suggested that the Board of Apportionment had not authority.

Alderman Rielly said there was no limit to this appropriation under the resolution. It does not state whether $10,000 or $100,000 can be expended.

Mr. Morris contended that the Board of Apportionment could receive the consent of the different departments to make such a transfer.

Mr. Cowing remarked that charity ought to commence at home. We had a sufficient number of poor sufferers in our own city who should be looked after.

The resolution of Mr. Cole was finally passed by a vote of 12 to 6.

FIREWORKS ORDINANCE.

Mr. Pinckney called up the proposed amendments to the ordinance prohibiting the discharge of fireworks in the city of New York on the 3d and 4th of July, and which provides that those days be excepted from the operations of the law. In order to make the ordinance satisfactory to the Board of Fire Underwriters Mr. Pinckney suggested that section 7 of the ordinance should read as follows:—

> No person shall fire, discharge, or set off in the city of New York any rocket, cracker torpedo, squib, balloon or other fireworks or thing containing any substance in a state of combustion except on the 3d and 4th day of July, 1877, under penalty of $5 for each offence.

Mr. Cowing objected to the passage of this amendment. If there was a reason why the law should not be enforced in 1877 there were also reasons why it should not be enforced at other periods. The original ordinance had been passed in 1866, and there were undoubtedly sound arguments why such a law should be placed upon the statute books. It was a protection to life, limb and property. If any body should be maimed or any property burned on next Fourth of July through the practice of exploding fireworks, he (Mr. Cowing) would feel personally responsible for such accident if he favored the proposed amendment.

Mr. Pinckney's amendment was passed by a vote of 12 to 6, so that all the boys will have a fair chance, as usual, to fire off the objectionable firecracker on next Wednesday.

BROOKLYN'S FIREWORK ORDINANCE.

Messrs. Heege & Kiffe, of No. 318 Fulton street, and F. Coghill, of No. 284 Fulton street, Brooklyn, were yesterday arrested for disobeying the law of that city, which prohibits the storage and sale of fireworks. They were arraigned before Justice Walsh, when their cases were adjourned till to-morrow. It is stated that Mr. Coghill intends sueing out an injunction restraining the city from interfering with his business. William Heege wishes to make this a test case. He says he purchased his fireworks before the ordinance was passed, and paid duty to the United States government on them.

WALL STREET,
TUESDAY, June 26—6 P. M.

Shares and shirts are not unlike each other in the property of losing their stiffness when the thermometer registers 90 degrees in the shade. It so happened to-day, the weakness of the market being intensified by an extreme dulness. Nevertheless transactions ran up to 88,000 shares, which was double yesterday's amount, and, if equally divided, would furnish the handsome complement of eighty-four shares for each member's day's work. The market, as a whole, was irregular, the strong and weak points being severally Hannibal and St. Joseph and Michigan Central. The first named was treated to a sharp rise, which grew out of a report that the property in dispute between the State of Missouri and the company, amounting, it is said, to about $4,000,000, had been decided in favor of the railroad. The despatch came from Boston, but at the company's office in this city they professed to know nothing about the matter. Michigan Central fell off from 41⅛ to 38⅝, closing at 39 bid. This was a rather curious sequel to the election, which had resulted, without opposition, in favor of the old or Taylor-Sloan party. So, after all the prognostications of the fearful storm which was to blow from the three points of the compass, dominated by the three contending parties, the affair has turned out to be simply a tempest in a teapot. The Gould proxies and the Vanderbilt proxies seem to have been surrendered at discretion, and the road will be run for another year in its old rut. The following bits of information were reported to the meeting. The total earnings for the year were $6,483,000; expenses, $4,439,000; taxes, $267,000. In comparison with the previous year the gross earnings show a falling off of $368,000, while there was a saving in operating expenses of about $200,000 and a reduction of the floating debt to $250,000. The Wabash purchasing committee's receipts, representing the old stock, on which $4 assessments have been paid up, sold down to $1 per share. A threatened further assessment of $2 is said to be the cause of the decline. A fresh imputation upon such credit as remains to the bankrupt Central Railroad of New Jersey was developed this morning in the lower prices of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre mortgage, which is guaranteed by the Jersey company, the quotation falling from 21 to 19, and closing at the latter figure. Rather better prices were obtained in final dealings for the active speculatives, and the market closed rather firm, but utterly without significance.

EUROPEAN MARKETS.

COMMERCIAL.

LONDON, June 26, 1877.

The Mark Lane Express, in its usual weekly review of the grain trade, says:—"Excepting a few warm showers the weather during the week has been brilliant and the sky almost cloudless. Growing crops have made a satisfactory advance toward maturity, except in the districts where the drought has been so severe as to check growth. The high temperature and dry atmosphere have been favorable for the development of the wheat ear and the cutting of meadow hay. On heavy soil the wheat is somewhat late, but on light lands the ears are plentiful. Barley and oats have improved in appearance, but the effects of a wet seed time and the subsequent cold period will most probably be traceable at the harvest. Haymaking has commenced, and the cutting of grass and clover is satisfactory. The depression which has been experienced in the wheat trade is in a great measure due to the continuation of heavy imports into London and the United Kingdom generally. The arrivals up to Friday were nearly 70,000 quarters, and selling to any extent has been quite impracticable. The weekly return has been swelled by the arrival of shipments from Southern Russian ports. The large outward movement from Germany has proved the existence of a much heavier surplus for export than was anticipated. The action of this country, North Russia and India has been so significant that the falling off of American supplies has come to be regarded as a matter of secondary importance. At the close of the week there appeared to be symptoms of returning firmness. During the past week the floating cargo trade for wheat ruled dull. Business was limited by the small selection off coast; but on Saturday further arrivals were reported, and the tone was firmer. Maize improved in value early in the week, but fresh arrivals since have depressed the market. Barley has been quiet."

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE WABASH RAILway Company:—
The foreclosure suits recently brought by a few of the holders of first mortgage bonds on the Wabash Railway have been amicably adjusted and withdrawn and the coupons of the bonds represented are under this arrangement to be funded.
While the business of the road has, like all railways in the country, suffered from the general stagnation, the decrease in the volume of traffic has been less than in that of most of the Western roads, and meantime extensive economies have been introduced in the working expenses of the line by reducing the number of employes, amount of salaries, wages, &c. Mr. A. L. Hopkins, the new manager, under whose direction these changes have been commenced, expresses great confidence in the future prosperity of the road. The area of crop planted is much larger this year than usual, and the prospects are favorable for a more abundant harvest than has been secured at the West for several years. Measures have also been introduced to obtain for the Wabash road its legitimate share of business as a part of the trunk line system.

THE STORM.

Damage from Wind and Rain in Several States.

CROPS BADLY INJURED.

Houses Unroofed, Buildings Demolished and Roads Washed.

HEAVY WIND AND RAIN IN PENNSYLVANIA.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 26, 1877.

The severest rain storm that has visited this vicinity for five years past burst over this city this afternoon, about five o'clock. It came from the northwest and extends over an area of about a quarter of a mile wide. Five of the six spans of the eastern section of the road bridge crossing the Susquehanna at this point were badly damaged, one of them being moved three feet and two one foot. The roof for nearly six hundred feet was blown off, and the weather boarding badly wrecked. The damage to the bridge is estimated at from $8,000 to $10,000.

A number of houses and barns were unroofed, and the telegraph wires generally prostrated. One of the turrets was blown off the Catholic Cathedral. Hundreds of trees in the vicinity were either uprooted or broken off. The storm, which was accompanied by very little lightning and thunder, lasted only a few minutes.

PROGRESS OF THE STORM.

OMAHA, Neb., June 25, 1877.

The storm of last night was very general throughout the West. It was first heard of at Cheyenne yesterday afternoon, and consisted of heavy hail and rain, with wind. It extended north of Sioux City, south of Kansas City and over the State of Iowa. No particular damage is heard of in the West, but South there were several washouts on the railroad. In Iowa the rainfall exceeded two inches. Some considerable damage was done in the roads. The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad had a bridge washed out near Logan. At Bear Grove several dwellings were blown down, and the town almost destroyed. The rainfall here exceeded one and a half inches. A large bridge was undermined and a number of cellars flooded, entailing considerable loss.

TRAINS DELAYED.

OMAHA, Neb., June 26, 1877.

Additional particulars of the storm show that more damage was done in Western Iowa than west of the Missouri River. Trains are delayed east and south.

DAMAGE AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, June 26, 1877.

The damage in Chicago will not exceed $20,000 at the outside. It consists chiefly in broken glass, unroofed houses, broken fences and signs and overturned vehicles. Two small houses on the north side were destroyed by the wind, and some five hundred trees in Douglass Park were blown down. A carpenter named Frederick Kassner, working on the corner of Eighteenth street and Centre avenue, was thrown out of a second story window by the force of the wind and struck on his head and last night he was in a dying condition.

FATAL EFFECTS IN CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 26, 1877.

No material damage was occasioned to property in this city by the great storm of last evening beside that reported in last night's despatches. At Springfield, Ohio, a child of David Widdennan was killed by a falling barn, and two other persons were seriously injured from the same cause. The residence of Mr. Click was levelled to the ground. Mrs. Click had an arm and leg broken. Two students of Wittenberg College were knocked senseless by falling bricks. A dozen large buildings, including the St. James Hotel and a sewing machine factory, lost their roofs.

The damage to the crops is incalculable, not only in the vicinity of Springfield, but along the whole pathway of the storm. At Reading, Ohio, the stable of Henry Reisenberg was blown down, instantly killing the proprietor. At Lancaster, Ohio, residences and stores were unroofed. The steeple of the Catholic church was blown down.

STORM IN ILLINOIS.

ST. LOUIS, June 26, 1877.

A Globe-Democrat special despatch from Mahomet, Ill., says the heaviest storm for fifteen years passed over that place this afternoon, and extended a number of miles around. The farm house and barn of Wylie Davis, a few miles south, was destroyed, and a Mr. Campbell seriously injured. The house of Wesley Nelson, near Mansfield, was blown down, and Gylvana Nelson was very badly hurt. Some cars were blown from the track of the Chicago and Paducah Railroad at Calef. Wheat, rye and oats were blown flat with the ground.

A special to the same paper from Champaign, Ill., says a violent storm raged there, at Urbana and other places. Several hundred fruit and other trees were blown down, and nearly one hundred stores and dwellings in Champaign and Urbana were more or less damaged. All the grain was badly broken, and a great deal of it entirely prostrated. A large quantity of rain fell.

BUILDINGS, FENCES, &C., WRECKED.

DIXON, Ill., June 26, 1877.

The storm struck this town at eleven o'clock yesterday and did great damage. The fair ground, with its buildings, fences, stands, trees, sheds, &c., is a complete wreck. The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, windmill, engine house and freight house were partially destroyed. Many buildings in the town were unroofed. Lumber in the yards was scattered and a few buildings demolished. Trees three feet round were twisted and broken off. No lives were lost.

INJURY TO GRAIN, GRASS, &C.

LINCOLN, Iowa, June 26, 1877.—The storm yesterday damaged all grains. Rye suffered heavily. Nearly every cornfield in the vicinity is flooded.

DANVILLE, Ill.—The damage to grain and grass is reported as very great in this section.

MOLINE, Ill.—Hailstones as large as hen's eggs fell near here yesterday, and great damage to the crops is reported.

MAHOMET, Ill.—Reports coming in show that the storm was widespread and disastrous to crops and property.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—The storm left the grain lying flat, and did considerable minor damage.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill.—The damage to wheat in this county by yesterday's storm is estimated at $100,000. There was also much other damage. The creeks are overflowing and the lowlands are flooded.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—The surrounding country suffered a severe loss by the storm. Probably one hundred houses and outbuildings are damaged here and in Urbana. The rain fell in torrents, and trees were uprooted by the score.

FAIRBURY, Ill.—The storm completely destroyed the unfinished Methodist Church here, entailing a loss of $7,000. A number of other buildings were unroofed, moved from their foundations or blown about.

DWIGHT, Ill.—The wind carried John Long's house—18x28 in size—about twenty feet, but none of the inmates were injured.

BROOKSVILLE, Ill.—Fourteen buildings were unroofed here yesterday.

GALESBURG, Ill.—Crops are reported to have been heavily damaged by the storm of yesterday.

DES MOINES, Iowa.—The rainfall was very heavy and the outlook for crops is gloomy, but no special damage was done.

INDIANOLA, Iowa.—A number of cattle were killed here yesterday by the storm and families were for a time compelled to vacate their basements.

MUSCATINE, Iowa.—Hundreds of trees were destroyed by yesterday's storm and thousands of panes of glass were broken by the hailstones. Nobody injured.

OMAHA, Neb., June 26, 1877.

CATHOLIC CENTENNIAL FOUNTAIN.

PHILADELPHIA, June 26, 1877.

The Catholic Centennial Fountain, in Fairmount Park, will be formally transferred to the city of Philadelphia on the 4th of July next, in trust for the free use of the American people. The fountain has been built from contributions from Catholics throughout America as an offering to the first century of American independence. Governor John Lee Carroll, of Maryland, and Governor John F. Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, have accepted invitations to deliver addresses upon the occasion. The fountain is adorned with colossal marble statues of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, Rev. John Carroll, Commodore Barry, Father Matthew and Moses.

DECLINES TO SURRENDER.

COLONEL WILKINS, COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS AT BALTIMORE, PREFERS TO RETAIN HIS OFFICE.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

BALTIMORE, June 26, 1877.

The Collector of the Port of Baltimore, Colonel Edward Wilkins, still "holds the fort," notwithstanding the fact that President Hayes has appointed John L. Thomas as his successor and unceremoniously invited Colonel Wilkins to "step down and out." The Collector has the support of the Creswell wing of the republican party in Maryland and the most cordial indorsement of a large majority of the business men of the city, notably the large importing houses. Colonel Wilkins declares his intention not to yield the post until compelled to do so, and is busy preparing his reply to the official act of the President, which will be forwarded to Washington. He has received numerous telegrams, letters and verbal messages urging him not to surrender.

MERCHANTS INDORSING WILKINS.

A formidable memorial, which has already received the signatures of three-fourths of the importers in Baltimore, was prepared to-day, urging the retention of Colonel Wilkins, which, with other influences, it is believed by Colonel Wilkins' friends, will have the effect of inducing the President to rescind the appointment of Mr. Thomas. The petition says:—

"TO THE PRESIDENT:—

"The undersigned importing merchants of the city of Baltimore respectfully represent that constant changes of officials are prejudicial alike to the interest of business and to that of government. Perfectly satisfied with the present administration of the Custom House, they beg to express the hope that it will not be disturbed by the removal of the present collector, Colonel Edward Wilkins."

THE FISHERIES.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER FOR THE CATCH—SEVERE GALE AND CONSEQUENT DAMAGES.

HALIFAX, June 26, 1877.

Advices have been received from the Magdalen Islands up to yesterday. The weather last week was very stormy and unfavorable for fishermen. On the 20th and 21st inst. it blew a terrific gale from the northwest, causing considerable damage on sea and shore. At Etang du Nord twenty fishing boats were driven ashore injured, and two were totally destroyed. Several vessels which were lying at anchor ran to the leeward for shelter.

The result of net mackerel fishing is better than that of last year.

Cod fishery is improving, and plenty of fish are obtained when the weather permits boats to go out.

OBITUARY.

JOHN BRUSH.

A telegram from Paterson, N. J., under date of yesterday, reports as follows:—John Brush, many years an extensive coal dealer and merchant and justice of the peace, died to-day, aged sixty-five years. He started the first Roman Catholic Sunday school in New Jersey, forty years ago, at Newark.

BROOKLYN POLITICAL PATRONAGE.

Mayor Schroeder has called a special meeting of the Brooklyn Board of Aldermen, to be held this afternoon, to take action with regard to the adoption of the budget for the new fiscal year. The Aldermen are called to meet at the same time and confirm the nomination of the names of the fifteen members of the Board of Education which were sent in by His Honor ten days ago. There was considerable excitement in political circles of Brooklyn yesterday attendant upon the confirmation of the Mayor's nominees—for President of the Board of City Works, Henry W. Slocum, and General Jourdan as President of the Board of Police and Excise Commissioners.

The fact that five democrats representing the strongholds of that party cast their votes for Jourdan was recognized in regular democratic or McLaughlin quarters as proof positive of the weakening power of old lines of partisanship. But when people who have closely followed the course of political events in Kings county witnessed the still more surprising and local revolutionary event, the unanimous confirmation of Mr. Slocum as head of the City Works Department, they were astonished by the total disregard of the heretofore recognized dictatorship of the leaders.

At the meeting this afternoon it is probable that the vacancies in the commissions will be filled. Ex-Assemblyman Michael Coffee (democrat), of the Third district, will probably be appointed to fill the place of Mr. Hurd in the Police and Excise Board. Ex-Assemblyman Jacob Woerth (republican), Sixth district, is spoken of for Fire Commissioner in place of James R. Rodwell, and Frederick Massey will doubtless be re-elected President of the latter named Board. There is another vacancy in the Police, Fire and City Works departments, but, though the applicants therefor are legion, there is a painful uncertainty as to their prospects. Pending these appointments the fate of very many subordinates hang in the balance, and hence the anxiety as to the result of the deliberations of the City Fathers.

IS THIS A HOMICIDE?

William Vickner, a middle-aged man, was taken to Bellevue Hospital about nine o'clock on Monday night from the Chamber Street Hospital, suffering from a fracture at the base of the skull. He was placed in one of the wards and died about four hours afterward. He stated that he lived at No. 85 Spring street. At an early hour yesterday morning the police of the Fourteenth precinct notified Police Headquarters that "William Vickner was found sick and destitute and was removed to Bellevue Hospital." How or in what manner the deceased came to his injuries is unknown. The post-mortem will throw no light on the manner in which he received the injury.

A VICIOUS PRISONER.

Joseph Malony, of No. 424 East Eleventh street, and John Keenan, his neighbor, quarrelled in a liquor store last night over their cups, and the former stabbed the latter in the left wrist. Officer Smith tried to arrest him and had quite a struggle. Before he succeeded in arresting Malony the latter bit him on the leg.

KILLED UNDER THE CARS.

An unknown man tried to get on a Hudson River Railroad car at Seventieth street yesterday afternoon, and falling was run over and killed. He was fifty years old, bald, with a florid complexion, wore dark trowsers and coat, black Derby hat and old gaiters. The body was sent to the Morgue.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Henry R. Russell, dealer in novelties, has been adjudicated a bankrupt on his own petition by Register Dwight. His liabilities amount to about $7,000, distributed among forty-four creditors, principally in Providence and Attleboro', Mass. He has no assets. The bankrupt made an assignment to John Daniell, Jr., about eighteen months ago.

Application was made yesterday before Register Ketchum by Rufus Wattles, dealer in wines at No. 10 Broadway, for his discharge from bankruptcy, and as none of the creditors made any opposition the petition will be granted.

Silas M. Styles, Richard K. Styles and John E. Styles, builders, at No. 350 East Sixty-second street, applied to Register Fitch yesterday for their discharge from bankruptcy. Opposition was made on the part of creditors, and ten days were allowed to file specifications.

A meeting of the creditors of Francis B Nicol, James T. Van Renssalaer and Albert C. Fuller, importers of china and bronzes, at No. 4 Great Jones street, was held yesterday, at the office of Register Dayton. The firm compromised some time ago at thirty-three and one-third cents on the dollar, but failed to make the second payment on their notes and went into bankruptcy, their liabilities being upward of $120,000. Yesterday creditors representing claims for nearly $70,000 voted for an assignee in bankruptcy, there being two candidates. Among the creditors voting the following had the largest claims:—M. Naismith, $5,164 10; Pacific Bank, $11,049 20; N. Whitman, $9,608 32; Thomas Donaldson, $1,105 72; Palmer & De Camp, $2,348 48; E. Sanford, $3,777 78; Brown Brothers & Co., $3,014 52; Wheeler & Wilson Manufacturing Company, $7,520 61; Ames Manufacturing Company, $1,048 60; M. Herzog, $1,921 51. Mr. Edward N. Bond was finally chosen assignee.

The following assignment, with schedule annexed, was yesterday filed in the Court of Common Pleas:—Auguste Flaurand and Eugene Flaurand, comprising the firm of A. Flaurand & Son, to Adolphe Salmon. The liabilities are stated at $399,995 61, nominal assets at $67,487 93 and real assets at $59,203 82. In the County Clerk's office there was also filed the assignment of Bingham, Banta & Co. to Fitzgibbons, Misser & Co.

AN ACCUSED ALDERMAN.

The special committee of the Yonkers Board of Aldermen appointed to investigate charges of malfeasance in office preferred against Joseph Riley, a member of that body, held a meeting yesterday afternoon for the purpose of taking testimony in the case. Alderman Riley is accused of attempting to extort money from a candidate for city treasurer as a consideration for his vote in favor of the said candidate when the latter's name should be sent in to the Board of Aldermen for confirmation. The accused, on being called to the witness stand, denied emphatically having ever authorized any person to ask the candidate alluded to for money wherewith to purchase his vote, and disclaimed having ever been influenced by any pecuniary or other improper consideration during his Aldermanic career. It is claimed on the part of Riley that the charges made against him have their origin in malice on the part of a disappointed contractor, and that they are wholly without foundation in fact.

RUN OVER BY A DRUNKEN DRIVER.

John Schreiber, of No. 222 West Thirty-fifth street, while intoxicated yesterday afternoon, and William Nolte, drove a milk wagon through Broome street at reckless speed. William Nolte, who sat by his side, endeavored to take the reins from his hands, and while they were struggling the wagon ran over and seriously injured a man. Schreiber and Nolte endeavored to escape, but were arrested by Officer Mulligan, of the Eighth precinct. Schreiber was held to await the result of their victim's injuries, and his companion was committed in default of $2,000 bail to answer, by Judge Wandell.

ASSAULTED IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

Colonel Thomas Raflerty could not, in the Fifty-seventh Street Court, yesterday identify Daniel Hudner as one of the men who made a cowardly attack upon him on Saturday last and inflicted two severe cuts upon his head. He said he was walking along Forty-fourth street on Saturday afternoon with a large sum of money in his pocket when he was struck two severe blows on the back of the head. A slungshot, which was produced in court, the Colonel said was the weapon used. When he was struck the second time he picked up a stone, and his assailants fled. Hudner was arrested on the information of Thomas Stapleton, a boy, who told the police he witnessed the assault and that Hudner was engaged in it.

Stapleton did not appear in court, and the prisoner was discharged.

THE COURTS.

The Property of Ex-Comptroller Haws' Sister-in-Law.

HARD WON AND EASY LOST.

A Father Obtains Possession of His Illegally Indentured Child.

A SPECIMEN JURY.

In the Court of Common Pleas, Trial Term, Part 3, Justice Daly presiding, the suit of Mrs. Adelaide Decker, as administratrix of her cousin's (Mrs. Eliza Baker) property, against Dr. Wellington B. Searles, executor of the deceased lady's last will and testament, was called. Mrs. Decker, in her complaint, demands the return of a large amount of property and the money realized on a certain life insurance policy. The Doctor, while not denying the receipt of the money, sets up a counter claim for professional services. His story, as narrated to the Court and jury yesterday afternoon by his lawyer, M. J. A. McCaffrey, exposes the state of affairs which have existed in the Baker family, the controversy and talk over which has interested and excited the residents of Harlem for some months. In May, 1874, the sister-in-law of ex-Comptroller Haws died, leaving her property to her relative, Mrs. Eliza Baker, who had received a large amount of property from her father. Dr. Wellington B. Searles, the family physician of the ex-Comptroller's legatee, was the executor of the will made in Mrs. Baker's favor. This woman resided with the deceased on 128th street. After the death of her relative she continued to occupy the premises. Her relatives ignored her; none of them desired to have her in their house, because, as alleged—and the reason was made known to the public—she was addicted to the excessive use of strong liquors. While debating among themselves what disposition should be made of her, Mr. Decker, the husband of the plaintiff in this suit, a cousin of Mrs. Baker, suggested that she take up her residence with the Doctor. She did so, and at her death, some months after, she made the Doctor the executor of her last will and testament. This will, which the Doctor propounded for probate, was rejected by Surrogate Hutchings on the last day of his official career. Mrs. Decker then applied as an administratrix, as if no will had been made. In the argument before the Surrogate the habits of Mrs. Baker were gone into in detail. One of the witnesses, also a relative, swore that she frequently had seen the dead woman drink four or five quarts of beer a day and top off with a quart of brandy or whiskey. The property which the Doctor held as executor of the will made by the ex-Comptroller's sister-in-law he disposed of and accounted for. Mrs. Decker claims that in this disposition were included a large amount of property belonging to Mrs. Baker before she was made heir. It is for this amount that she sues. A copy of a letter written by Mrs. Decker to the relative who had seen the immense quantities of beer and whiskey consumed by Mrs. Baker was read. The letter recited that she (Mrs. Decker) will give her $500 if she succeeds in her suit against the Doctor. A large number of the more respectable residents of Harlem were present as witnesses. The actuary and cashier of the Harlem Bank, with a small library of large and small account books, were also present. For the plaintiff there appeared M. Cantine and for defendant M. J. A. McCaffrey. The case is still on and promises to occupy two or three more days.

THE ITALIAN'S GOLD.

As Detective Dunn, of the Central Office, was walking through Bleecker street on Monday afternoon he encountered Andrew Bressant, a notorious confidence operator, whose actions aroused the officer's suspicions. On taking the prisoner into custody quite a scuffle ensued, during which Bressant threw away the gold watch and chain he was wearing. Detective Dunn succeeded in getting his prisoner to Police Headquarters, where the accused was recognized as being one of the perpetrators of the robbery of $4,936 in gold from an Oregon cattle dealer named Nicolas Maccoi in April last. It appears that Maccoi had accumulated the money during sixteen years' labor, and was coming to New York to return to Europe, and while here was accosted by three strangers, of whom Bressant is suspected to be one, who ingratiated themselves into his confidence and thus induced Maccoi to intrust his hard-earned wealth with one of the trio, who decamped with it, followed by his companions. Poor Maccoi was then forced to return to Oregon to begin work anew, and he is now in that section of the country. Immediately following Bressant's arrest Mr. William F. Howe applied for and secured a writ of habeas corpus, returnable yesterday. The prisoner was arraigned in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday on this process, but Judge Donohue adjourned the hearing until to-day, giving directions that meantime a telegram be sent to Maccoi, in Washington Territory, informing him of the facts of the case, and asking him if he wished the prisoner prosecuted, with the further order that if no reply is received to the telegram to-day the prisoner should be discharged.

A FATHER AND HIS CHILD.

In October, 1872, Margaret Cunningham, then about two years of age, was living with her father, James Cunningham, at Fishkill Landing, where he kept a liquor saloon. Upon a charge of keeping a disorderly house he was arrested by the town authorities, and, meantime, his child Margaret was indentured by Mr. Wodell, Superintendent of the Poor in Dutchess county, to Mrs. Hanson, wife of the Constable of Fishkill, the child, under such articles of indenture, to remain with Mrs. Hanson until she was of age. Mr. Cunningham, upon his release, came to this city and is now employed in the works of the Manhattan Gas Company. Having discovered the whereabouts of his child a writ of habeas corpus was obtained by Mr. William F. Howe, his counsel, and under such writ the case was referred to William Sinclair, Clerk of Supreme Court, Chambers, who made his report yesterday that, in his opinion, the father was entitled to the custody of the child. Upon this report Judge Donohue gave his decision embodying the same in the following brief opinion:—"The relator in this case is admitted to be the father of the infant. The respondent claims to hold the child by virtue of an indenture made by a Superintendent of the Poor of Dutchess county. There is not the least legal evidence of the facts on which the respondent's right to make the indentures would exist. The indenture, therefore, is without authority and of no effect, and the infant must, therefore, be restored to its father.

NO PASS BOOKS NO MONEY.

Arend H. Kuper, by Gustavus A. Wehrtens, his guardian, brought a suit against William Plaatje under the following circumstances, as set forth in the complaint. Plaintiff was a nephew of Arend Blancki, who died in January, 1876, and who, he says, deposited $5,000 in the Seamen's and Irving Savings banks in trust for him. Blancki in his lifetime received pass books from the respective banks, and during his lifetime did not revoke the gifts to the plaintiff, who was entitled to receive the deposits on the 6th of September, 1876, but upon demand the banks refused to pay the money until the bank books were produced; that the defendant has the pass books and refuses to give them up, claiming that they are a part of the estate of the deceased, whose executor the defendant claims to be; that the books belong to the plaintiff and the possession of them is necessary to establish his title to the deposits, and without them he cannot obtain the money justly belonging to him. The answer states that the gift was revoked by the last will of the deceased and the bank books were given to the defendant as executor in the presence of the plaintiff, stating that that was the property he wanted to have divided among the persons named in the will. He says the plaintiff contested the will and that the contest is yet undecided by the Surrogate. He claims that the plaintiff has no right to the pass books, but that they belong to him for the uses and purposes mentioned in the will. Judge Van Brunt, in an opinion rendered yesterday, gave judgment for the defendant, holding that there is no evidence of an absolute trust.

A NOT OVER BRIGHT JURY.

A suit was commenced a few days since before Judge Freedman, in the Superior Court, in which the plaintiff, Rudolph Wyman, sought to recover from Louis Blumgart, Felix Hayman and Max Hesselberger some $4,000 on a promissory note. The defendants, Blumgart and Hesselberger, pleaded usury, and that the money was loaned to Hayman alone, and a separate defence was put in by Hayman. The case was sent to the jury night before last, and Judge Freedman ordered a sealed verdict to be delivered yesterday morning. Judge Freedman was somewhat surprised to learn that the jury had quietly wended their way homeward, leaving a little memorial behind them in the shape of a sealed verdict in favor of Blumgart and Hesselberger, without any allusion whatever to the defendant Hayman. Judge Freedman gave the jury a severe lecture, and said he could not see how they induced the Court officer in charge to release them when they had not agreed upon a verdict. He then ordered that they show cause, at ten A. M. to-morrow, why they should not be punished for contempt of Court in getting discharged under those circumstances. The Court will hold an investigation, and the Court officer and all concerned are to be examined. The possibility of a lively time for the offending jurors is somewhat strengthened by the statement that the several counsel will attend with affidavits.

MORE CITY SUITS.

In the suit of James Murray against the Mayor, &c., the plaintiff sued to recover $550 salary as attendant upon the Supreme Court from November 14, 1871, to May 1, 1872. Plaintiff was duly appointed by the usual resolution, and on November 14 was discharged by Andrew H. Green, then Deputy Comptroller. On the trial plaintiff claimed that this was no legal discharge, and offered to prove service. Judge Freedman, however, refused to entertain such an offer, under the circumstances, and dismissed the complaint. Elliot Sandford appeared for the plaintiff and Corporation Counsel William C. Whitney, D. J. Dean and Charles P. Miller for the city.

Sarah M. Norman brought suit against the city to recover $10,000 for injuries sustained from a fall on the ice in front of No. 629 Third avenue on the evening of January 5, 1877. The ice was formed by water which flowed from a leader at the junction of Nos. 629 and 631 Third avenue across the sidewalk and froze into an icy ridge some three inches high. Upon the close of the plaintiff's case a motion for non-suit was made, on the ground that no negligence on the part of the city had been shown, and that if there was any negligence at all in the case it was that of the plaintiff. Judge Freedman accordingly dismissed the complaint. Messrs. Baker and Sperry appeared for the plaintiff, and Corporation Counsel William C. Whitney, Charles P. Miller and E. H. Lacombe for the city.

THE DANCER WILL CONTEST.

The matter of the contest of the will of Miss Mary M. Dancer was again up yesterday before Surrogate Calvin. Counsel for the contestants asked the Surrogate to name a time when he would hear argument on the validity of the provisions of the will to which objections might be made. The Surrogate replied that he supposed it was the intention of the contestants to offer proofs as to the validity of the will in advance of argument being had. Counsel said he had not yet completed the preparation of his documentary evidence. The Surrogate thought that after the proofs of the contestants had been submitted, the proponents should be given an opportunity to produce further testimony if they desired it, before final argument was had. Counsel on both sides acquiesced in this view. It was then arranged that the objections of the contestants should be filed on or before the 2d day of July next, and that they be specific as to what provisions are objected to and on what grounds. Mr. Dyett, counsel for Mr. Jeremiah, the executor and proponent of the will, asked that the will be immediately admitted to probate and letters testamentary be issued. He said there was no good reason why this should not be done and the provisions of the will afterward construed. There were legacies of $5,000 each to aunts of Miss Dancer, which ought to be paid as soon as possible, there being no contest as to their validity, and if probate of the will was delayed they might never get their money, as they were already near seventy years old each. After a sharp bout between counsel the case was again adjourned to the 9th prox.

TROUBLES OF LEGATEES.

Another strange contest to a will has just been commenced in the Surrogate's Court. Patrick Fennelly, formerly a liquor dealer in this city died a short time ago, leaving an estate valued at $75,000 to his widow, Mary, and four children by his marriage with her, which will was duly admitted to probate. Now, one Michael Fennelly, claiming to be the brother of the deceased, seeks to have the probate of the will opened and come in and contest on the grounds that he was not cited to appear when probate of the will was sought, and that the instrument was obtained by undue influence on the part of the widow while the testator was in an unconscious condition. The contestant also alleges that at the time the testator married Mary, the woman claiming to be the widow, he had another wife and two children living in Ireland, but all of whom, he states, are now dead. The case came on for hearing yesterday before Surrogate Calvin. After a lengthy discussion between counsel the further hearing of the case was adjourned to October next, ex-Surrogate Tucker, the alleged brother's counsel, undertaking in the meantime to procure evidence of the first marriage from Ireland.

A STRANGE CHARGE OF FORGERY.

A rather unusual case—so far as but very rarely a similar case comes before the United States courts—was before United States Commissioner Osborn yesterday. Flemong W. Jackson, a colored cook at the Stevens House, charged his wife, Mary Josephine Jackson (also colored), of bright and intelligent appearance, with forging his name to a money order, on which, as he alleged, she drew $50 forwarded to him from Richmond, Va. From the testimony taken in the case it appears that Jackson and his wife came to this city a few months ago from Richmond with the intention of residing here. That after a little time, from some cause not very clearly developed, Jackson grew suddenly jealous of his wife, and after some little domestic differences arising therefrom she left him. They had, during their sojourn in Richmond, lived very comfortably and happily, and among some effects which they left behind them at Richmond was a piano on which several payments had been made. After his wife left him he wrote to a friend in Richmond to have the piano sold and the amount in excess of the amount due on it up to date to be sent to him in a money order. This was done, and a letter containing a money order for $50 to Jackson's order was addressed to him from Richmond. This order was paid to some man other than complainant on an application which, he alleges, was forged by his wife in his name. The defendant's counsel, Mr. Robert N. Waite, on presenting his client's case to the Court, contended that her husband himself had got the person who drew the money to personate him, had signed the application himself, and had concocted the whole plot for the purpose of involving the wife in a very serious charge through a feeling of unjustifiable jealousy and revenge. He claimed that Mrs. Jackson was entirely innocent of the charge, and moved that the complaint be dismissed. After a full hearing, however, Commissioner Osborn decided to hold Mrs. Jackson in default of $1,000 bail, which she was unable to furnish, and, in consequence, was removed to Ludlow Street Jail.

SUMMARY OF LAW CASES.

Judge Blatchford, of the United States District Court, goes to Newport on Monday next, and will return on the 10th prox., to sit a few days, to dispose of some pressing business.

There was commenced yesterday, before Judge Sedgwick, in the Superior Court, the trial of a suit brought by George B. Kingsbury and another against Michael Kirwan, to recover $1,200, growing out of certain cotton speculations entered into two years ago, which amount the jury gave them.

In our report of the suit of Jacob R. Shipherd against Charles C. Cokefair it was erroneously stated that the parties were partners, and that the defendant has control of the mortgage forming the basis of the suit and has threatened to have it foreclosed. The defendant states that no such control exists, nor have any such threats been made, and moreover the value of the entire property mortgaged is but $13,800.

In the case of the lawyer Frederick A. Botty, charged by Judge Dinkel, of the Fourth District Court, with contempt of court, the facts of which have been published in the HERALD, ex-Judge Joachimsen yesterday submitted points on behalf of Judge Dinkel, before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, Chambers, claiming that the writ of habeas corpus should be dismissed. Mr. William F. Kintzing, counsel for Botty, also submitted yesterday his points. A decision is expected to-day.

In the raid made by Captain Foley on Saturday night last on disorderly houses in his precinct among those arrested were John Brown and Lizzie Jones, they each being charged with keeping a disorderly house in Canal street. Judge Murray fixed their bail respectively at $2,000 and $1,000, and it is alleged that he refused to accept responsible bondsmen. A writ of habeas corpus was sued out by Mr. Robert H. Racey, counsel for the prisoners, and on this writ a hearing was had yesterday before Judge Donohue, the object of the writ being to compel acceptance of the bond offered. After hearing Mr. Maisac, of the District Attorney's office in opposition, Judge Donohue took the papers.

Clara Wermies, who was married to Mathias Wermies some eleven years ago, is now seeking a limited divorce upon the ground of alleged cruel and inhuman treatment. She charges in her complaint that her husband abandoned her some two years since, and that she did not hear from him for a year, when she learned that he was living with one Bertha Middledorf, in Willett street. She says, further, that she is without any means of support, and that he has an income of $1,500 a year. Upon an application for alimony the case came up for a hearing yesterday before Judge Donohue, Mr. Stephen Phiel appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. William F. Howe for the defendant. After hearing the facts of the case a decree of separation was ordered and the matter of alimony reserved for future adjudication.

THE M'DONALD HOMICIDE.

The trial of James Blake, charged with the killing of John McDonald, at the corner of Dominick and Varick streets, on the evening of last New Year's Day, was continued yesterday. The prisoner, who is a young man of respectable appearance, was surrounded by his parents and a large number of his relatives. Mrs. McDonald, the widow of the deceased, with her infant, occupied a seat in the witness box. Mr. Spencer, with whom was associated Mr. Peter Mitchell, summed up on behalf of the prisoner. He referred to the excellent character the prisoner had previously borne, and contended that he could not naturally have committed so grave an offence as that charged. He submitted that the prisoner was in the clutches of a powerful foe, and that it was only when he felt the fingers of the deceased slowly killing him by strangulation that he pulled his pistol and fired in self-defence. In conclusion, he argued that the prisoner was justified in resorting to any violence which would have the effect of saving his own life, and asked the jury to acquit the prisoner.

Assistant District Attorney Rollins replied on the part of the prosecution. While expressing sympathy for the position of the accused, he submitted that the pity should be divided; that there should be some extended to the widow whose husband was struck down without warning. He contended that if the prisoner went forth unwhipped of justice similar acts would be repeated by others. The learned counsel, in the course of a very powerful and effective address, drew a vivid picture of the murder on New Year's Day; how the prisoner, without provocation and when he could readily have got away, deliberately drew his pistol and sent his companion into eternity. He said the prisoner belonged to a class of young men who armed themselves with weapons on New Year's Day and on the Fourth of July in anticipation of some sort of disturbance—a class of young men who, after they have taken a few drinks, feel disposed to quarrel and shoot the first man they come across. Mr. Rollins severely criticised the conduct of the prisoner on the witness stand, whose cool deportment clearly evidenced his entire absence of regret for the terrible crime he had committed. In concluding his exhaustive address the prosecuting counsel warned the jury to be mindful of their duty and not to allow the youth of the prisoner to affect their judgment in a case where justice loudly called for adequate punishment. Judge Sutherland then charged the jury, pointing out the law bearing on the offence as charged in the indictment. After an absence of about two hours the jury returned a verdict of murder in the second degree. Messrs. Spencer and Mitchell made strenuous efforts to have the sentence postponed on motions for a new trial and in arrest of judgment. Judge Sutherland, however, denied these applications, observing at the same time that he fully concurred in the verdict rendered by the jury. He then formally sentenced Blake to imprisonment for life in Sing Sing Prison.

KILLED WITH AN UMBRELLA.

Richard O'Keefe, a bricklayer, residing at No. 445 West Forty-first street, was arraigned for trial by Assistant District Attorney Rollins charged with the killing of John Fitzsimmons. It was alleged that on the night of November 6, last, the prisoner, with two other bricklayers—the deceased and Jeremiah Dynan—met in McCormack's liquor saloon, Forty-first street and Eighth avenue. They all drank very freely and finally a dispute arose as to some trade matters. In the course of the altercation O'Keefe struck Dynan with an umbrella which he carried in his hand. Fitzsimmons rushed to his friend's assistance, whereupon O'Keefe made a lunge at him with the umbrella and struck him in the eye. Fitzsimmons shouted immediately that he had lost his eye, and Dynan attempted to hold O'Keefe, but the latter escaped. He was subsequently arrested but denied the charge. Fitzsimmons was conveyed to Bellevue Hospital and died the following day. Dynan was examined by Mr. Rollins as to the affair, and the above facts were disclosed. Mr. Howe, who defended the prisoner, had not concluded his cross-examination of that witness when the Court adjourned until this morning.

COULD NOT BEAR DISGRACE.

A SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE ON BEING COMMITTED FOR DRUNKENNESS.

Among the prisoners arraigned before Judge Wandell yesterday afternoon was a very respectable looking, well dressed man, who said he was Alfonso Rapitan, of Norfolk, Va. He was arrested on Sixth avenue by Officer Kelly, of the Twenty-ninth precinct, early in the day, while in an almost helpless state of intoxication. Rapitan was recognized by the Judge as a man whom he had committed in the latter part of last week, on a similar charge and fined $10. Yesterday he had no money, and he was placed in the box preparatory to being removed to the Tombs. While in the pen he entered the closet adjoining and after some time made his appearance again among the prisoners with a deep wound two inches long by one deep under his right ear, from which the blood flowed profusely. Officer Van Dusen, who has charge of the male pen, noticing his condition, sent to the New York Hospital at once for a surgeon. Rapitan on being questioned admitted that he had cut himself, and said he wished to end his existence. He informed the officers that he came to New York about two weeks ago and put up at the Hotel St. Omer. Being asked whether he was married he answered:—

"Yes, and that is the whole cause of the trouble. My wife came from Norfolk with me, and ran away from me last Saturday for no cause that I can think of. Since then I have been wandering around, and have been drinking freely, but when I found myself to-day in a prison pen I could not stand the disgrace."

The surgeon dressed Mr. Rapitan's wound, and had him removed to the hospital in West Fifteenth street. Rapitan is said to be a man of considerable means, and owns a large amount of property in Wilmington, N. C.

ANOTHER CLERK RUINED.

Fast living and a too elastic conscience brought to the bar of the Tombs Police Court yesterday George H. Whitney, a well educated and respectable looking young clerk, charged with embezzlement. He had been in the employ of Sgobel & Day, merchants, of No. 26 Beaver street, and was frequently intrusted with large sums of money with which to pay customs duties. Some months ago his employers, receiving information that he was leading a fast life and spending money profusely, watched him and traced to him the sum of $722, unaccounted for on the books. The case was placed in the hands of Captain Caffrey, of the First precinct, who detailed Detective Hogan to find the young man, he having in the meantime resigned his position. The detective succeeded in finding him in Staten Island, where his parents, highly respectable people, reside. On being taken into custody, Whitney confessed that his embezzlement would aggregate $4,000. Justice Smith remanded him until to-day.

BETRAYED BY A CONVICT.

Acting upon information given by Lewis F. Nephew, alias Charles Nilson, now an inmate of the Blackwell's Island Penitentiary, the police yesterday arrested Edward E. Burnett, on the charge of having received $185 worth of pens, stolen from the store of Henry Hoe, No. 91 John street, some months ago. Justice Smith, at the Tombs, yesterday remanded him for examination.

FEMALE JAILBIRD CAGED.

Annie Riley, alias Kate Connelly, alias Emma Thomas, alias Emma Jones, arrested by Detective Kerns, of the Central Office, on Monday, charged with robbing a number of persons by whom she had been employed as a servant, was arraigned at Jefferson Market Court yesterday. Though the prisoner has been operating for a long time, and as many as ten different complaints were made against her at Police Headquarters, Mr. Joseph J. Homburg, of No. 128 East Sixty-fifth street, and Mrs. Theresa Kostka, of Ninth avenue and Forty-sixth street, were the only ones who appeared to press charges. The prisoner was in Mrs. Kostka's employ only one day, when she left, taking a watch and chain and other articles, valued in all at $90. From Mr. Homburg's house she took a clock valued at $75. When arrested thirteen pawn tickets were found in her possession, and it is thought depredations for the past few months would aggregate $5,000.

She was committed under the name of Kate Williams in $6,000 bail to answer. She has been arrested and convicted several times for similar offences and has twice escaped from Sing Sing.

A DASTARDLY ASSAULT.

Mary Pagans, a poor colored woman, was walking through Thompson street Saturday night on her way home holding in her hand $9, her week's wages. Near Houston street she met a colored man named John Buckner, who deliberately struck her a violent blow in the stomach, threw her into a horse trough, snatched the money and escaped. The trough was full of water, and between the blow and the ducking Mary was completely overcome and was unable to make any outcry. She remembered Buckner's face, however, and he was arrested Monday night by Officer Henze, of the Eighth precinct. Justice Wandell committed him yesterday in default of $2,000 bail to answer.

A PLATE GLASS BREAKER.

The demand of Wendell Lummerwick for money having been refused by C. G. Reichert, in his saloon, No. 1,051 Third avenue, on Monday evening, Lummerwick broke plate glass worth $200. Yesterday morning, on complaint of Mr. Reichert, he was committed in the Fifty-seventh Street Court.
